Contributors

Tony Addison is a senior research fellow in the World Institute for Development Economics Research (WIDER), of the United Nations University, in Helsinki. He was previously lecturer in economics, and director of the programme in Quantitative Development Economics, at the University of Warwick, UK.

Philip Amis is a senior lecturer at the School of Public Policy, University of Birmingham, UK. He has worked extensively on issues of urban poverty and development in Africa and India. He is a key member of a research project (1998/2001) on Urban Governance, Partnership and Poverty. In 1996/97 he was team leader of an impact assessment study of the Department for International Development’s Slum Improvement Projects in India.

Email address: p.amis@bham.ac.uk

Richard Bond is a freelance consultant and research fellow of the Institute for Development Policy and Management (IDPM), University of Manchester, UK, where he also teaches. He has worked in the development field for 30 years and has extensive field project experience in Africa and South Asia.

David Booth coordinates the Poverty and Public Policy Group at the Overseas Development Institute in London, UK. A sociologist, he edited Rethinking Social Development (Longman, 1994) and was formerly Professor of Development Studies at the University of Wales, Swansea.

Katrina Brown is Senior Lecturer in Environment and Development in the School of Development Studies, and Senior Research Fellow at the Centre for Social and Economic Research on the Global Environment (CSERGE), at the University of East Anglia, Norwich, UK. She is co-author and editor of Approaches to Sustainable Development (with Richard Auty, Pinter, 1997), The Causes of Tropical Deforestation (with D.W. Pearce, University College London Press, 1994), and Land Use and the Causes of Global Warming (with W. Neil Adger, Wiley, 1994).
Martin Brownbridge is currently macroeconomic advisor for the Ministry of Finance, Planning and Economic Development in Uganda. He is the co-author, with Charles Harvey, of Banking in Africa: The Impact of Financial Sector Reforms since Independence (James Currey, 1998).

Ron Clarke is Honorary Senior Fellow at the Institute for Development Policy and Management, University of Manchester, UK, where he was previously Deputy Director and also director of the Senior Management Programme. In his earlier career he was head of university adult education and extension departments in Uganda and Malawi.

Email address: ron.clarke@man.ac.uk

Christopher Colclough is Professorial Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, Brighton, UK. He is a development economist with interests in human resources, education financing and reform, labour markets and aid policies. He is principal author of Educating All the Children (Clarendon Press, 1993); and editor of Marketizing Education and Health in Developing Countries (Clarendon Press, 1997) and Public Sector Pay and Adjustment: Lessons from Five Countries (Routledge, 1997).

Email address: C.Colclough@ids.ac.uk

David Colman is Professor of Agricultural Economics in the University of Manchester, UK. He is vice-president of the International Association of Agricultural Economists, a past president of the UK Agricultural Economics Society, and advisor to the House of Commons Agriculture Committee on milk policy. He has also undertaken contractual work for several international agencies and national governments.
Paul Cook is Reader in Economics and Director of the Centre for Regulation and Competition at the Institute for Development Policy and Management at the University of Manchester, UK.

Jocelyn De Jong lectures in social policy and social development at the Institute for Development Policy and Management, University of Manchester, UK. Formerly she worked in the Middle East on reproductive health for the Ford Foundation and was involved in the International Conference on Population and Development in Cairo in 1994.

O.P. Dwivedi is Professor of Environmental Policy/Law and Public Administration at the University of Guelph, Canada, and Fellow of the Royal Society (Canada). He has published 31 books and over 95 articles and chapters in scholarly publications. He is a past president of the Canadian Political Science Association, and former vice-president of the International Association of the Schools and Institutes of Administration. He is chairman of the Research Committee on Technology and Development, International Political Science Association.

Email address: odwivedi@uoguelph.ca

Paul Francis is Senior Lecturer in Social Development at the University of East Anglia, Norwich, UK. Research interests include the anthropology of development in Africa and Asia, social impact assessment, rural service provision, participatory discourse, bureaucracy and socially engaged Buddhism.

Email address: paul.francis@uea.ac.uk

Clive George is a senior research fellow at the Institute for Development Policy and Management at the University of Manchester, UK. He has worked with government and other organizations in over 15 developing and transitional countries, on strengthening environmental legislation, procedures and institutional capacity. His research includes study of the relationships between environmental impact assessments and sustainable development.

Email address: clive.george@man.ac.uk

Jonathan Goodhand is currently an Associate of INTRAC, Oxford, UK. After several years as an aid worker he conducted research with Manchester University on non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and peace-building in complex political emergencies. Most recently he coordinated a project for the Department for International Development on strategic conflict analysis. He has published several articles on NGOs and conflict.

Mary E. Hilderbrand is Fellow in Development and Adjunct Lecturer in Public Policy, Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, Cambridge, MA, USA. She is based in the Kennedy School’s Executive Programs. Prior to this she was Research Associate, Harvard Institute for International Development. She has written on the politics of economic reform, institutional capacity, state reform in Latin America, and the role of politics and governance in development.

Richard Jolly is Honorary Professor at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, Brighton, UK, where he was Director from 1972 to 1981. From 1982 to 1995 he was Deputy Director for programmes of UNICEF and from 1996 to 2000, Special Coordinator for the United Nations Development Programme’s (UNDP’s) Human Development Report.

Moses N. Kiggundu is Professor at Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada. Publications include Managing Organizations in Developing Countries (Kumarian Press, 1989). He is currently working on managing globalization for developing countries and transition economies, with reference to capacity development. From 2000 to 2001, he served as UN Expert on Globalization and the State.

Email address: kiggundu@ccs.carleton.ca

Colin Kirkpatrick is Professor of Development Economics and Director of the Institute for Development Policy and Management, University of Manchester, UK. He has written extensively in the field of development economics and policy and his current research interests include development finance, trade policy and sustainable development, and impact assessment methodologies for development policy.

Email address: colin.kirkpatrick@man.ac.uk

Peter Lawrence is Senior Lecturer in Economics at Keele University, UK. His current research is on structural adjustment and agricultural exports and also on the microeconomic effects of macro-financial adjustment policies in developing countries.

Nick Manning is Senior Public Sector Management Specialist at the World Bank where his responsibilities include knowledge management of the Bank’s civil service and administrative reform work. Previous positions include Chief Technical Adviser (UNDP) in Lebanon; and Adviser, Commonwealth Secretariat, London. Email address: nmanning@worldbank.org

Willy McCourt teaches Human Resource Management at the Institute for Development Policy and Management in the University of Manchester, UK. He is co-editor, with Charles Polidano and David Hulme, of The Internationalization of Public Management: Reinventing the Third World State (Edward Elgar, 2001).

Andrew McKay is Senior Lecturer in Economics at the University of Nottingham, UK. His main research focus is on poverty and inequality in developing countries, including country studies of poverty, poverty impacts of policy, and issues of poverty measurement and monitoring.

Oliver Morrissey is Director of the Centre for Research in Economic Development and International Trade (CREDIT) and Reader in Development Economics at the School of Economics, University of Nottingham, UK. He is also a Research Fellow at the Overseas Development Institute (London).

Lauchlan T. Munro is Chief of Planning with UNICEF, New York. His research covers the planning, management and evaluation of social sector projects and the economics of health, education and social protection, especially in Bhutan, Canada, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Uganda and Zimbabwe.

S. Mansoob Murshed is Associate Professor of Development Economics at the Institute of Social Studies (ISS) at The Hague. He was a Research Fellow at UNU/WIDER (World Institute for Development Economics Research) in Helsinki, Finland where he directed projects on globalization and economic aspects of conflict. Email address: Murshed@iss.nl
Frederick Nixson is Professor of Development Economics in the School of Economic Studies, University of Manchester, UK. Before coming to Manchester in 1971 he was lecturer in economics at Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda. His recent books include Development Economics, 2nd edition (Heinemann, 2001).

Ruth Pearson is Professor of Development Studies and Director of the Centre for International Development at the University of Leeds, UK. She has researched gender and development issues for over 20 years and is co-editor (with C. Jackson) of Feminist Visions of Development: Gender Analysis and Policy (Routledge, 1998). She is currently working on regulating working conditions for export factories, and homeworkers, and on the links between social policy and women’s employment in developing countries. She is also researching micro credit and community currencies in the North and South.

Email address: r.pearson@leeds.ac.uk

Charles Polidano is Director of Strategy and Planning in the Office of the Prime Minister, Malta. He has written extensively on public management and governance. His work has appeared in several journals including Public Administration, Political Studies, Governance and World Development. He was formerly Lecturer in Public Sector Management at the Institute for Development Policy and Management, University of Manchester, UK.

A. Premchand is a retired Assistant Director, International Monetary Fund, and author of numerous books, book chapters and papers. His latest book is Control of Public Money, (Oxford University Press, 2000). He has worked as a consultant for the Asian Development Bank and the World Bank.

Email address: apremchand1@home.com

Jon S.T. Quah is Professor of Political Science at the National University of Singapore, co-editor of the Asian Journal of Political Science, and a member of Transparency International’s Governance Research Council.

Email address: polqst@nus.edu.sg

Mark Robinson is a Fellow of the Institute of Development Studies, currently on secondment with the Ford Foundation in New Delhi. His research interests include governance, democracy and civil society, and his latest book, edited with Gordon White, is The Democratic Developmental State: Politics and Institutional Design (Oxford University Press, 1998).
Dennis Rondinelli is the Glaxo Distinguished International Professor of Management, Kenan-Flagler Business School, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, NC, USA. Professor Rondinelli does research on international business and management, corporate environmental policy, and private enterprise development.

James Roth works for the Social Finance Programme of the International Labour Organization. He works on microfinance and HIV/AIDS. In addition to this he heads up a team undertaking a multicountry case study researching microinsurance and microfinance organizations.

Email address: jr243@cam.ac.uk

Prakash Shetty is Chief of Nutrition Planning for Assessment and Evaluation in the Food and Nutrition Division of the Food and Agriculture Organization, Rome, Italy. He was formerly Professor of Human Nutrition in the Public Health Nutrition Unit, Department of Epidemiology and Population Health, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, London, UK.

Brian Smith is Emeritus Professor of Political Science at the University of Dundee, Scotland, and Visiting Professor at the University of Exeter, UK. His publications include Decentralisation (Allen & Unwin, 1985) and Understanding Third World Politics (Macmillan, 1996).

Lance Taylor is Director of the Center for Economic Policy Analysis and Arnhold Professor of International Cooperation and Development in the Economics Department, New School University, New York, USA. His previous positions include Professor of Nutrition Economics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Jan Kees van Donge lectures at the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague, Netherlands, and has also taught public administration and related subjects at the Universities of Zambia, Dar es Salaam, Wageningen and Malawi. His present contribution is an outcome of a special project on New Public Management at the Institute of Social Studies in 1998.

John Weiss is Professor of Development Economics, University of Bradford, UK. Currently he is Research Director of the Asian Development Bank Institute, Tokyo, Japan.