Contributors

Editors: Anis Chowdhury is an Associate Professor of Economics at the School of Economics & Finance, University of Western Sydney, Australia. Iyanatul Islam is an Associate Professor of Economics at the School of International Business, Griffith University, Australia. Both are founding co-editors of the Journal of the Asia Pacific Economy, and have co-authored Newly Industrialising Economies of East Asia (Routledge), Asia–Pacific Economies – A Survey (Routledge) and The Political Economy of East Asia: Post-Crisis Debates (Oxford University Press).

Chris Baker formerly taught Asian history and politics at Cambridge University. He has lived in Thailand for 20 years and now works as an independent writer. He has co-authored (with Pasuk) Thailand Economy and Politics (OUP, 1995), Thailand’s Boom and Bust (Silkworm, 1998) and Thailand’s Crisis (Silkworm, 2000).

Tain-Jy Chen is Professor of Economics of National University Taiwan and consultant to Chung-Hua Institution for Economic Research. His research interests are in international economics and economic development. He has co-authored Political Economy of U.S.–Taiwan Trade (University of Michigan Press) and edited Taiwanese Firms in Southeast Asia: Networking Across Borders (Edward Elgar, 1998) and Weathering the Asian Financial Crisis: the Experience of Taiwan.

James W. Dean is Professor of Economics at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia, Canada and Kaiser Professor of International Business at Western Washington University in Bellingham, Washington, USA. For the past ten years his writing and research has focused on debt, banking and financial crises and their resolution. He has lectured and consulted in most crisis regions of the world, notably Asia, Africa, Latin America and Central Europe.

Shafiq Dhanani obtained his doctorate in economics from Oxford University. An independent policy consultant based in Jakarta over the past ten years, he has undertaken extensive work for the Indonesian government as well as for several international organizations, including UNIDO, ILO, UNDP and the World Bank. His previous experience in developing countries includes a number of short- and long-term assignments in South Asia and East Africa, as well as postgraduate teaching in development economics in the Netherlands.

Syed Asif Hasnain is the UNIDO representative in Jakarta, where he has been since 1996. In his 20-year association with UNIDO, he has dealt with several industrial development issues, ranging from the development and transfer of technology to industrial development in sub-Saharan Africa and, more recently, environmental issues arising from the industrialization of developing countries.

Elaine Hutson is Lecturer in Finance at Dublin City University. Her PhD is from the University of Technology, Sydney, where she lectured in corporate finance and financial markets prior to moving to Dublin. Her published research focuses on financial regulation, mergers and acquisitions, and international finance.

Colm Kearney is Professor of Finance at Dublin City University. He holds postgraduate degrees from University College Dublin, Essex University, the University of Western Ontario and the University of Warwick. He has published widely in the areas of financial market volatility and international finance.

C.H. Kwan is a senior economist at the Nomura Research Institute and a senior fellow at the Research Institute of Economy, Trade and Industry, Japan. He has served on various policy committees of the Japanese government, including the Economic Council (advising the prime minister) and the Council on the Foreign Exchange and Other Transactions (advising the minister of finance). Dr Kwan specializes in the Asian economy and Japan–Asia economic relations, with emphasis on exchange rate issues. His publications include Economic Interdependence in the Asia–Pacific Region.
O. Yul Kwon has held the Korea Foundation Chair in Korean Studies at Griffith University since 1996. He is also the Director of the Australian Centre for Korean Studies at Griffith University. Before joining Griffith University, Dr Kwon was Professor at the University of Regina, Canada, and was the Director of the university's Institute for Northeast Asian Studies. Professor Kwon has published five books, numerous articles in refereed journals and business magazines, chapters of books and special columns in newspapers. His recent research interests focus on Korean economic and business issues, and he has published extensively on Korean economic development, economic policy, the 1997 financial crisis and Korea's international business environment. He is a member of the editorial board of Asian Studies Review (Blackwell).

Leong H. Liew is an Associate Professor in international business at Griffith University. His major research interests and publications are in the areas of China’s political economy and economics of transition. He is the author of The Chinese Economy in Transition (Edward Elgar, 1997) and co-editor with C.L. Chiou of Uncertain Future: Taiwan–Hong Kong–China Relations After Hong Kong’s Return to Chinese Sovereignty (Ashgate, 2000).

Joseph Y. Lim is a Professor of Economics at the University of the Philippines, Diliman, Quezon City. He took his MS in Operations Research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and his PhD in Economics at the University of Pennsylvania. He has also been a visiting scholar at the University of Cambridge. He has written various articles on the Philippine economy and the East Asian crisis. His articles have appeared in the Journal of Development Economics, World Development, Journal of Contemporary Asia and in economics books published inside and outside the Philippines.

Pasuk Phongpaichit is a Professor in the Faculty of Economics, Chulalongkorn University, Bangkok. She has written widely in Thai and English on the Thai economy, Japanese investment, corruption and the illegal economy.

Rajah Rasiah obtained his doctorate in economics from Cambridge University (1992) and is currently Professor of Industrial Organisation at the National University of Malaysia, and Dean and Professor of Business Economics at Universiti Malaysia Sarawak. He has published several internationally refereed books and articles. He has also undertaken consultancies for several international organizations, including the World Bank, UNCTAD, UNIDO and ILO.

Amartya Kumar Sen is the 1998 Nobel Prize winner for Economics. He is the Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Lamont University Professor Emeritus, Harvard University. He is a Past President of the Econometric Society, the International Economic Association, the Indian Economic Association, and the American Economic Association.