

Contents

Figures	vii
Tables	viii
Foreword John H. Dunning	ix
Preface	xiii
PART ONE A SYSTEMIC FRAMEWORK OF ECONOMIC COMPETITIVENESS AND GROWTH
1. Introduction	3
2. Literature review	12
3. Analytical framework	23
PART TWO EVOLUTIONARY AND REVOLUTIONARY CHANGE IN SOCIO-ECONOMIC SYSTEMS
4. Long waves of socio-economic development	36
5. Socio-institutional adjustment	58
6. Third industrial revolution	80
PART THREE DETERMINANTS OF COMPETITIVENESS AND GROWTH IN MODERN ECONOMIES
7. Productive resources	100
8. Technological innovation and diffusion	104
9. Organizational efficiency	113
10. Product market characteristics	126
11. International business activities	135
12. Institutional framework	153
13. Government role	161
PART FOUR TOWARDS A MACRO-ORGANIZATIONAL THEORY OF ECONOMIC ORGANIZATION
14. Changing nature, extent and pervasiveness of market failures	175
15. Changing nature, extent and pervasiveness of government failures	195

16. Theoretical framework	207
17. Private, public and third sector organizational solutions for overcoming specific market failures	216
18. Long-term and more recent trends in economic organization	238
19. New macro-organizational role of government	245
PART FIVE COMPETITIVENESS AND GROWTH DURING THE PRESENT TECHNOECONOMIC PARADIGM SHIFT
20. Economic performance of industrialized countries	257
21. Methodology of the empirical study	269
22. Summary of statistical results	276
23. Conclusions: the challenge of the new paradigm	289
Appendices: Benchmarking tables	295
Bibliography	336
Index	367