List of contributors

Mary Daly is a Professor of Sociology at the School of Sociology and Social Policy at Queen’s University Belfast. Among the fields on which she has published are poverty, welfare state, gender, family and the labour market. Much of her work is comparative, in a European and international context. Her most recent book, The Gender Division of Welfare (2000), undertakes a comparative analysis of how the British and German welfare states affect gender inequalities. She is a member of a number of European networks and boards on topics related to social policy, family and gender.

Barbara Hobson is a Professor of Sociology and Gender Studies at the Department at Stockholm University and Director of the Advanced Research Program in Comparative Gender Studies. She has published articles on gender and welfare states concerning the themes of gender and citizenship, social movements and welfare state formation, and women’s economic dependency and social citizenship. Her most recent published research includes Making Men into Fathers: Men, Masculinities and the Social Politics of Fatherhood (2001) and Gender and Citizenship in Transition (2000). She is a founder and a current editor of Social Politics: International Studies of Gender, State, and Society.

Ute Gerhard is a Professor of Sociology at the University of Frankfurt am Main. She is researching and teaching in the interdisciplinary field of women’s and gender studies. Since 1997 she has been Director of the Cornelia Goethe Centre for Women’s and Gender Studies. She is co-editor of Feministische Studien, a journal for women’s studies and L’Homme, a journal for feminist history. She has published widely around women’s rights, social policy, the history of women and the women’s movement, and feminist theory. Her most recent publications include Frauen in der Geschichte des Rechts: Von der Frühen Neuzeit bis zur Gegenwart (1997), (Women in the History of Law: From Early Modern Times to the Present) and Atempause: Feminismus als Demokratisches Projekt (1999), (Feminism as a Democratic Project).

Arnlaug Leira is Professor of Sociology at the University of Oslo, Norway, with welfare state and social policy studies as a main field. She has published extensively on family and social policy, the reconciliation of work

Trudie Knijn is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Social Sciences. She is research member of the Amsterdam School for Social Sciences and the Inter-university Center for Social Science Theory and Methodology. She is also founder and co-ordinator of the European Network on Theory and Research on ‘Women, Welfare State and Citizenship’. Her recent work focuses on social policies in the field of care, work and family and on gender and citizenship from a comparative perspective. Publications in English include: ‘The rationalized marginalization of care’, in B. Hobson (ed.), Gender and Citizenship in Transition (2000); ‘Careful or lenient: welfare reform for lone mothers in the Netherlands’ (with Frits van Wel), Journal of European Social Policy (2001); and (with Monique Kremer) ‘Gender and the caring dimension of welfare states: toward inclusive citizenship’, Social Politics (1997).

Jane Lewis is Barnett Professor of Social Policy at the University of Oxford. She works on gender and social policies, family policies, the history of social provision, social care and the role of the third sector. Her most recent publications include: with K. Kiernan and H. Land, Lone Motherhood in Twentieth Century Britain (1998); (ed.), Lone Mothers in European Welfare Regimes (1997); (ed.), Gender, Social Care and Welfare State Restructuring in Europe (1998); The End of Marriage? Individualism and Intimate Relationships (2001).

Ruth Lister is Professor of Social Policy at Loughborough University. She is a former Director of the Child Poverty Action Group and served on the Commission on Social Justice, the Opsahl Commission into the Future of Northern Ireland and the Commission on Poverty, Participation and Power. She is a founding Academician of the Academy for Learned Societies for the Social Sciences and a Trustee of the Community Development Foundation. She has published widely around poverty, income maintenance and citizenship. Her latest book is Citizenship: Feminist Perspectives (Macmillan, 1997).

Bérengère Marques-Pereira is a Professor of Political Science at the Université Libre á Bruxelles (l’ULB). She is the Director of the Centre de Sociologie Politique et du Groupe d’Etudes Latino-Américaines de l’Institut de Sociologie à l’ULB and Présidente de l’Association Belge de Science

Ilona Ostner is a sociologist and Professor of Social Policy at the Georg-August University Goettingen, Germany. She is the author of numerous comparative articles on gender, family, employment and social policy and co-editor (with Stephan Lessenich) of Drei Welten des Wohlfahrtskapitalismus: Der Sozialstaat in vergleichender Perspektive (1998) and co-editor of the Zeitschrift für Soziologie (Journal of Sociology).

Chiara Saraceno is Professor of Family Sociology at the Department of Social Sciences, University of Turin. She is the Director of the University’s Interdepartmental Center for Gender Studies, and she was a Consultant of the Ministry for Social Affairs on the issues of family policies and of policies to combat social exclusion (1998–2001). She is a member of the Italian Poverty Commission and co-ordinates the Scientific Working Group on Family Policies at the Ministry for Social Affairs. She has written extensively on family changes and family policies, on poverty and social policies, and on gender and women’s issues. Her most recent publications include: Separarsi in Italia (1998); Mutamenti della famiglia e politiche sociali in Italia (1998); and (ed.), Social Assistance Dynamics in European countries (forthcoming).

Birte Siim is Associate Professor at the Department of History, International and Social Studies, Aalborg University, Denmark. She participated in the Danish investigation on Democratic Citizenship in Denmark (1989–1994). She is the co-ordinator of GEP: The Research Programme Gender, Empowerment and Politics (1996–2001). She has published widely on gender, welfare states, citizenship and democracy. Much of her work is comparative in a European context. Her latest book in English, Gender and Citizenship: Politics and Agency in France, Britain and Denmark (2000), combines a theoretical and comparative analysis of the interrelation of citizenship and gender in three cases, focusing on shifts and continuity in gender relations during the last 30 years.

Dietlind Stolle is Assistant Professor in Political Science at McGill University, Canada. She has written her dissertation on Communities of Trust: Social Capital and Public Action in Comparative Perspective. She has published on social capital, for example, in the American Behavioral Scientist and the journal Political Psychology. She has also contributed to various collections of essays on trust and social capital. She was the co-director (with Marc Hooghe) of the European Consortium for Political Research Workshop on Voluntary Associations, Social Capital and Interest Mediation in 2000 and is currently working on a project on the role of families in trust development.