Contributors

Werner Baer is Professor of Economics at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA. He has written extensively on Latin American Economic Development. The fifth edition of his book The Brazilian Economy was published by Praeger in 2002.

Maciej Baltowski is Professor of Economics and Chair of the Department of Industrial Organisation at the Technical University, Lublin, Poland. He is author and co-author of four books on privatization in Poland.

Paul Bennell is an independent consultant specializing in human resources development in sub-Saharan Africa. He has also undertaken extensive research on foreign investment, industrial policy and privatization in Africa.

Anthony E. Boardman is Van Dusen Professor of Business Management in the Strategy and Business Economics Division at the University of British Columbia, Canada, and an expert on the comparative performance of public and private enterprise.

Dieter Bös is Professor of Economics at the University of Bonn. He has been managing editor of the Journal of Economics (Zeitschrift für Nationalökonomie) since 1973. He has published many books and papers in refereed journals, mainly on regulation and privatization, on taxation and on public procurement.

Joseph C.H. Chai is Associate Professor at the University of Queensland, Australia. He has published extensively on the Chinese economy. His latest books include China: Transition To a Market Economy, Industrial Reform and Macroeconomic Instability in China (Clarendon Press, 1998, 1999) and The Economic Development of Modern China (Edward Elgar, 2000).

Paul Cook is Professor of Economics and Development Policy in the Institute for Development Policy and Management (IDPM) at the University of Manchester, UK. He is the Director of the Department for International Development (DFID) funded Centre on Regulation and Competition in the Institute. He has previously held teaching positions in universities in Canada and the United States, and has published widely in the areas of privatization and public enterprise reform and development policy.
Michael A. Crew is Professor of Economics and Director of the Center for Research in Regulated Industries, Rutgers University in the USA and editor of the Journal of Regulatory Economics. He has published five books, 20 edited books and numerous articles in journals.

Saul Estrin is a Professor of Economics at the London Business School and the Research Director of its Centre for New and Emerging Markets. He researches on privatization in transition economies.

Igor Filatotchev received his PhD in Economics from the Institute of World Economy and International Relations, Moscow, in 1985. Since 2002 he has been Professor of Strategic Management at the University of Bradford School of Management. He has published extensively in the fields of corporate governance and strategy, as well as in various international business areas.

Cosmo Graham is a Professor of Law at the University of Leicester, UK. He is a public lawyer who specializes in the law relating to the regulation of public utilities. His other main specialism is in competition law and he has teaching interests in company law. He is the Director of the Centre for Utility Consumer Law and a member of the UK’s Competition Commission.

Paul Hare is Professor of Economics in the School of Management, Heriot-Watt University, Edinburgh. Professor Hare founded the research centre, CERT (Centre for Economic Reform and Transformation) at Heriot-Watt University and directed it from 1990 to 1997. Since then he has been Head of School before becoming Director of Research in the School. His research concentrates on transition economies, with recent work including studies of institutional change, trade policy and industrial restructuring.

Graeme A. Hodge is Professor of Law and Director of the Privatization and Public Accountability Centre at Monash University in Australia. He is an advisor to Australasian governments and has written books and articles on privatization, contracting out and management.

Colin Kirkpatrick is Professor of Development Economics and Director of the Institute for Development Policy and Management (IDPM) at the University of Manchester, UK. He has published extensively in the field of impact assessment of public policy and decision making. His earlier research work focused on the impact of privatization on economic performance in the context of developing countries. He is currently researching on issues of regulatory impact assessment and the utilities sector in lower-income countries. Professor Kirkpatrick is Co-Director of the Regulation Programme at the IDPM’s Centre on Regulation and Competition.

Paul R. Kleindorfer is the Universal Furniture Professor of Decision Sciences and Professor of Business and Public Policy at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, USA.

Claude Laurin is Associate Professor at l'Ecole des HEC in Montreal, Canada. His research interests and publications lie primarily in the areas of privatization, performance measurement and corporate governance.

Iván Major chairs the Department of Economics at the University of Veszprém and is Senior Fellow at the Institute of Economics of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences.

William L. Megginson is Professor and Rainbolt Chair in Finance at the University of Oklahoma, USA. He is also a member of the Global Advisory Committee on Privatization in Italy and has published privatization-related articles in several top academic journals.

Michal Mejstrík is Professor of Corporate Finance and Banking at Charles University, Prague. He has published over 50 contributions on privatization and corporate governance in Central and Eastern Europe, including the co-authored book, The Privatization Process in East–Central Europe: Evolutionary Process of Czech Privatization (Kluwer, 1997).

Tomasz Mickiewicz works at University College, London, School of Slavonic and East European Studies, UK, and is Director of the Centre for the Study of Economic and Social Change in Europe. He publishes on privatization, corporate governance and employment.

Alexander Muravyev is Lecturer in Economics at the School of Management, St Petersburg State University, Russia. He also works for the Russian–European Centre for Economic Policy based in Moscow, a policy research and advice centre funded by the EU-TACIS Programme. His main research area is privatization and corporate governance in transition economies, a field in which he has already carried out empirical studies and published a number of papers.

Jeffry M. Netter is Professor of Finance at the University of Georgia. His research and teaching is in corporate governance and government regulation. He has published in leading finance, law and economics journals.

Anthony Ogus is Professor of Law at the University of Manchester, UK, and Research Fellow at the University’s Centre on Regulation and Competition. He is also Research Professor at Maastricht University and has written books and articles on regulation and the economic analysis of law.

David Parker is Professor of Business Economics and Strategy at Aston Business School, Aston University, UK, and Co-Director of the Regulation Programme at the Centre on Regulation and Competition in the Institute for Development Policy and Management (IDPM) at the University of Manchester, UK. He has written extensively on privatization and economic regulation and is a member of the UK’s Competition Commission and an Economic Advisor to the Office of Utilities Regulation in Jamaica.

Miguel D. Ramírez is Professor of Economics at Trinity College in Hartford, CT, USA. His research is primarily dedicated to analysing the challenges and opportunities that Latin American nations face as they attempt to stabilize and reform their economies.

Colin Robinson is Professor of Economics at the University of Surrey and Editorial Director of the Institute of Economic Affairs. His research is mainly in energy economics and regulation.

Adam Rosevear graduated from London Business School with a doctorate on enterprise restructuring in Ukraine. Adam has also been involved in a number of consultancy projects in the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

David Saal is Lecturer in Industrial Economics at Aston Business School, Aston University, UK. His research focuses on the impact of public policy on industrial performance, including work on the impact of utility privatization and regulation on productivity growth, as well as analysis of the impact of defence procurement policies on manufacturing performance.

Erwin Schwella is Professor and Director of the School of Public Management at the University of Stellenbosch in South Africa. He is a senior consultant to governments in and outside South Africa. He has published widely in academic journals and is co-author of a number of well-known academic textbooks. Currently his main academic and professional interests are in the fields of leadership and change management in the context of transformation. He is listed in Who’s Who in the World as an international leader in his fields of endeavour.

Aidan R. Vining is the CNABS Professor of Business and Government Relations in the Faculty of Business Administration, Simon Fraser University, Vancouver, BC, Canada. He has published extensively in public policy and policy analysis. Recent articles have appeared in the Journal of Policy Analysis and Management, the Journal of Risk and Insurance, Public Administration Review and Social Science and Medicine, among others. He is the co-author of Policy Analysis: Concepts and Practice (Prentice-Hall, 1999) and Cost–Benefit Analysis: Concepts and Practice (Prentice-Hall, 2001).

Thomas Weyman-Jones is Professor of Industrial Economics, Loughborough University, UK. He researches incentive regulation and productivity analysis, and is a specialist advisor on network utility price controls to several European regulatory authorities.

Johan Willner has been Professor of Economics at Åbo Akademi University, Turku/Åbo, Finland since 1988. His published or forthcoming papers deal with imperfect competition, privatization and public ownership, and taxation and equality.