Early versions of many of the chapters in this volume were presented at the international conference on The Political Economy of Institutional Development: Institutional Design in Periods of Rapid Change held at the University of Messina in September, 2000. The conference was organized by the Department of Economics and Finance of the University of Messina with the support of the Association of Public Sector Economics (Italy), the ISMA Centre of the University of Reading (UK) and the John Locke Institute (USA).

The idea of organizing the conference and editing a book of collected papers has had a long gestation period. We conceived the project during the receptions and inter-session breaks of the 1999 European Public Choice Meetings in Lisbon and the 2000 North American Public Choice Meetings in Charleston, South Carolina. We owe debts to many people who provided valuable insights at various stages of the project. We wish to express our sincere gratitude to a number of senior academic colleagues who contributed with their helpful advice and guidance, although none of them should be blamed for the shortcomings of our analysis. These include Francesco Forte, Bruno S. Frey, Bernard Grofman, Arye Hillman, Charles K. Rowley and Friedrich Schneider.

We would like to thank the illustrious contributors who were generous with both their time and their wisdom. We would also like to express deep appreciation to many conference participants who served as moderators and discussants and whose ideas are incorporated in the revised versions of the chapters included in this volume. In this connection we would like to mention Roberto Artoni, Sebastiano Bavetta, Domenico Da Empoli, Valentino Dardanoni, Maria Laura Di Tommaso, Giuseppe Eusepi, Emma Galli, Manfred Holler, Kai A. Konrad, Michele Limosani, Isidoro Mazza, Patrick McNutt, Fabio Padovano, Joan Rossellò Villalonga, Massimo Salzano and Heinrich Ursprung.

Other people, beside the authors and discussants, have made important contributions to the project. Graduate students and administrative employees of the Department of Economics and Finance of the University of Messina helped with the logistics. Giuseppe Armaleo, Lara Gitto, Teresa Grillo and Dario Maimone Ansaldo Patti put in extra hours providing crucial administrative support. We are pleased to acknowledge the Department of Social and Decision Sciences at Carnegie Mellon University for providing logistical support for the preparation of this volume during Pietro Navarra's stay in Pittsburgh as Fulbright Research Scholar.

We would like to thank Piero Orteca and the Bonino-Pulejo Foundation for the generous financial support that made the conference possible. Other institutions that have sponsored our work include the National Research Council of Italy, the Bank of Italy, the University of Messina and both the Municipality and the Province of Messina.

Dymphna Evans of Edward Elgar was very patient with the endless delays that inevitably accompany a project with numerous contributors. We would like to thank her as well as Edward Elgar, for their support.
