Tables

1.1 Information and the actions of investors and consumers 14
2.1 Mean annualized percentage growth rates in municipal EAV, six-county sample 40
2.2 TIF-effect estimates for the old and new six-county samples 41
2.3 Growth in available municipal property value, 1995–98, for the six-county municipality sample 43
2.4 Mean annualized percentage growth rates in municipal EAV, 102-county sample 46
2.5 Growth in available municipal property value, 1995–98, for the 102-county municipality sample 47
2.6 Descriptive statistics for the six-county TIF district sample 50
2.7 Growth in TIF property value, 1981–97, for the six-county TIF district sample 55
4.1 Urban area definitions for the western United States, 1990 95
4.2 Distribution of building material and car sales for non-central places in metropolitan areas in the western United States 99
4.3 Year that type of urban containment policy began in western metropolitan areas 106
4.4 Percentage statewide discretionary municipal revenue from component sources for western United States 107
4.5 Descriptive statistics for variables included in regression analyses 108
4.6 Descriptive statistics and regression results 112
6A.1 Estimated hedonic price function 165
6A.2 Descriptive statistics, prices and expenditure shares for sample 166
6A.3 Demand system for variable attributes 168
6A.4 Demand system for dichotomous attributes 170
7.1 Effects of marginal decrease in the property tax rate 191
7A.1 Comparative statics results: industrial sector 204
8.1 US housing units in neighborhood associations 212
8.2 Percentage of unit votes to amend a neighborhood constitution 252