Contributors

Wladimir Andreff, Professor of Economics at the University Paris 1 Panthéon Sorbonne, France, Honorary President of the International Association of Sport Economists, Vice President of the French Economic Association, has co-authored four books and published 72 articles in sports economics. He has advised the Committee for the Development of Sport of the Council of Europe and the French Ministry for sports, he is a member of the National Council for Physical and Sporting Activities, and serves on the editorial board of 12 economic journals in eight countries. He is a former soccer player.

Robert A. Baade is the Vail Professor and Chairperson of Economics and Business at Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, Illinois, USA and President of the International Association of Sport Economists. He has researched the economics of sport for more than two decades, he has published extensively on the subject and, in particular he has studied the economic impact of professional sports teams, stadiums and mega-events on metropolitan economies.

Eric Barget, Lecturer at the Sport Faculty of Poitiers (France), Researcher at the CEREGE (Centre de recherche en gestion, ‘Management research centre’) (IAE, Institut d’administration des Enterprises, Poitiers, France), collaborator at the Centre for the Law and Economics of Sports (Limoges), has published on economic impact, external effects, cost–benefit analysis, economic value of sporting events and amateur sport.

Carlos Pestana Barros, Assistant Professor of Economics at Instituto Superior de Economia e Gestão (ISEG), Technical University of Lisbon, Portugal has published 12 articles on economics, in the Journal of Sports Economics, the European Journal of Sport Management Quarterly, Sport Management Review, International Advances in Economic Research, the European Journal of Management Quarterly, in Portuguese economic journals and in three books.

David J. Berri, Associate Professor of Economics at California State University-Bakersfield, USA, has authored or co-authored numerous papers in the field of sports economics, examining such topics as competitive balance, the impact of labour strikes upon consumer demand, the measurement of worker productivity, and the rationality of decision makers.

Frédéric Bolotny, researcher at the Centre for the Law and Economics of Sports at Limoges University, France, has authored ‘Les clubs de football’, a study of European football economics, published in the French economic newspaper Les Echos, in 2002. He is a member of the Direction Nationale du Contrôle de Gestion, the body in charge of financial control of the French football league.

Ross Booth, Senior Lecturer, Department of Economics, Monash University, Melbourne, Australia, has authored articles on the Australian football league in Economic Papers and...
Sport Management Review and a chapter in Rodney Fort and John Fizel (eds), International Sports Economics Comparisons (New York: Praeger, 2004). He is an ABC TV football broadcaster.

Jeff Borland, Professor and Head of the Department of Economics at the University of Melbourne, Australia, has written on topics on sports economics relating to the demand for attendance for Australian Rules football, and on sporting labour markets. He is currently on the Editorial Board of the Journal of Sports Economics.

Jean-François Bourg, Researcher at the Centre for the Law and Economics of Sports (CDES) at Limoges University, France, has authored 10 books and 60 articles on sports economics. He serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Sports Economics and has been an expert for the Committee for the Development of Sport of the Council of Europe. He has co-authored (with J.J. Gouguet) Analyse économique du sport (Paris: PUF, 1998) and Économie du sport (Paris: La Découverte, 2001).

Chantelle Bramley has a BEc (Honours) from the University of Sydney and an MSc in Economics from University College London where she majored in competition economics. Chantelle has worked on a wide range of anti-trust cases in the UK and the EU on behalf of government and competition agencies, as well as companies such as Sainsbury’s, Granada Media, Roche Pharmaceuticals and the FIA. She is currently working in Canada on competition and regulatory issues in the retail energy sector.

Babatunde Buraimo, Lecturer at the University of Central Lancashire, Preston, England, teaches courses primarily in the area of sports economics and sports management. His academic and research interests focus on competitive balance, the economics of sports broadcasting and attendance demand for professional teams.

Fiona Carmichael, Reader in Economics at the University of Salford, UK, has published widely in the economics of sports. Her publications include papers on the transfer market and transfer fee determination in association football and on output and efficiency in rugby league and Premier League soccer.

Jean-Loup Chappelet, Professor of Public Management at the Swiss Graduate School of Public Administration (IDHEAP), University of Lausanne, Switzerland, director of the MEMOS (Executive Masters in Sports Organisations Management) programme, specialises in the management and governance of non-profit and Olympic organisations. He has written Strategic and Performance Management of Olympic Sport Organisations (Champaign, Ill: Human Kinetics, 2005).

Braham Dabscheck, Senior Fellow, Faculty of Law, University of Melbourne, Australia, works in the areas of Australian industrial relations, industrial relations theory and economic, legal and industrial relations aspects of professional team sports. He has published over 50 papers on sport.

Michel Desbordes, Professor of Sport Marketing at University Marc Bloch of Strasbourg and at the ISC Business School of Paris, France. After completing his PhD on innovation in sporting goods in 1998, he became a specialist in sports sponsorship and sport events, leading an MBA in Paris from 1999 to 2005. He took up his current position in Strasbourg in September 2005. In addition to his academic activities, he works as a consultant in sport marketing for MX Sports (www.mxsports.net).

Nicolas Eber, Professor of Economics at the Robert Schuman University of Strasbourg, France, has published several articles in the area of sports economics, especially on doping.

Karl W. Einolf, Associate Professor of Economics and director of the honours programme at Mount Saint Mary's University in Emmitsburg, Maryland, USA, focuses his research on the economics of sports and applied microeconomics. He has published numerous articles in the Journal of Sports Economics, the Review of Economic Design, and others.

Patrick Feehan, holds a recent doctorate in sports economics from the University of Salford, UK and is the author of journal articles on the price and income elasticities of attendance demand in English Football.

Rodney Fort, Professor of Economics, School of Economic Sciences, Washington State University, USA, is a recognised authority worldwide on sports economics and business. His works are obligatory citations and his most recent book, Sports Economics, 2nd edition, (Upper Saddle River, NJ: Prentice-Hall, 2006), is rapidly becoming the best selling textbook in the area.

David Forrest, Reader in Economics in the University of Salford, UK, whose recent publications reflect strong research interests in sports economics and the economics of state lotteries, is involved in sport as a keen cricketer.

Bernd Frick, Professor of Personnel and Organisational Economics at the Witten-Herdecke University, Germany, focuses his research on the development and implementation of inventive compatible remuneration systems, the economics of high-performance work systems, industrial relations, the economic analysis of labour law and the economics of professional team sports.

Jaume García, Professor of Economics, Department of Economics and Business, Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Spain, has published two articles on the economics of Spanish football in the Journal of Sports Economics and the European Sport Management Quarterly.

Bill Gerrard, Professor of Sport Management and Finance in the Leeds University Business School, UK, focuses his research on the determinants of sporting and financial performance in professional sports teams. He is the former editor of European Sport Management Quarterly. His sporting allegiances are to Leeds United, Celtic and Scotland.

John Goddard, Professor of Financial Economics at University of Wales, Bangor, has his research interests in the economics of professional sports and industrial organisation. He is co-author (with S. Dobson) of the monograph The Economics of Football (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2001), and (with John Wilson and John Lipczynski) the textbook Industrial Organization: Competition, Strategy and Policy (Harlow, Essex: FT Prentice-Hall, 2005).

Jean-Jacques Gouguet, Senior Lecturer in Economics at Limoges University, France, and researcher at the Centre for the Law and Economics of Sports (CDES) and Centre de Recherches Interdisciplinaires en Droit de l’Environnement, de l’Aménagement et de l’Urbanisme (CRIDEAU), mainly involved in regional science, sport and the environment, has authored four books and many articles in sports economics. He serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Sports Economics and Revue Juridique et Économique du Sport and is the General Secretary of the International Association of Sport Economists.

Elizabeth Gustafson, Associate Professor of Economics and department chair at the University of Dayton in Dayton, Ohio, USA, has taught at the University of Cincinnati and at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. She has been the co-organiser of multiple sessions on sports economics at the Western Economic Association meetings every year since 1995 and has co-edited two books of current research from those meetings.

Lawrence Hadley, Associate Professor of Economics at the University of Dayton, Ohio, USA, has his primary research interest in the economics of the labour market for Major League Baseball. He is co-editor (with J. Fizel and E. Gustafson) of Baseball Economics: Current Research (Westport, CT: Praeger, 1996) and (with J. Fizel and E. Gustafson) Sports Economics: Current Research (Westport, CT: Praeger, 1999), and serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Sports Economics.

Barrie Houlihan, Professor of Sport Policy in the Institute of Sport and Leisure Policy at Loughborough University, UK, has written widely on many aspects of sports policy including doping, sports development, the diplomatic use of sport, and sport and young people.
Brad R. Humphreys, Associate Professor in the Department of Recreation, Sport and Tourism at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA, has his research interests in the economics of sports and the economics of higher education, and has published in a number of journals, such as the Journal of Policy Analysis and Management, Southern Economic Journal, the Journal of Economic Behavior and Organization, the Journal of Sports Economics, Regional Science and Urban Economics and Public Choice.

Claude Jeanrenaud, Professor of Public Economics at the University of Neuchâtel, Switzerland, and Head of the Institute for Economic and Regional Research, has acted as a consultant for the Swiss government, the OECD and the Council of Europe. He has edited Competition Policy in Professional Sports: Europe after the Bosman Case (Antwerp: Standard editions, 1999) and The Economic Impact of Sport Events (Neuchâtel: Centre International d’Étude du Sport, 1999).

Leo H. Kahane, Professor of Economics at California State University, East Bay, USA, is the co-founder and editor of the Journal of Sports Economics. He has published papers on sports economics in various journals including Economic Inquiry, Review of Industrial Organisation and Applied Economics.

Stefan Késenne, Professor of Economics, University of Antwerp and Catholic University of Leuven, the Netherlands, has published on sports economics in the Journal of Industrial Economics, the Scottish Journal of Political Economy, Applied Economics, the Journal of Sports Economics, the Journal of Sport Management and European Sports Management Quarterly.

Markus Kurscheidt, Lecturer at the Sport Management Department, School of Sport Science of the Ruhr-University Bochum, Germany, focuses his research on sports events and managerial economics and has published numerous articles in these areas. He serves on the board of the Association of German-speaking Sports Economists and is a founding member and serves on the board of the International Association of Sport Economists.

Frank Lagarde, lawyer and researcher at the Centre for the Law and Economics of Sports, Limoges University, France, is co-author (with J.-C. Breillat) of Code du sport (Paris: Dalloz, 3rd edn, 2005).

Umberto Lago, Associate Professor at the University of Bologna, Italy, teaches marketing and strategic management. He is co-author of a book on the Italian football industry Il business del calcio (with A. Baroncelli and S. Szymanski; Milan: Egea, 2004) and is currently teaching Strategic Management at the Master of Sport organised by the universities of Bologna and San Marino.

Marc Lavoie, Professor in the Department of Economics at the University of Ottawa, Canada, is also a member of the university’s Research Centre for Sports in Canadian Society. He has published two books on ice hockey and several papers on sports economics in general, a number of which dealt with the issue of discrimination. His other interests include post-Keynesian economics and monetary economics.

Michael Leeds, Associate Professor of Economics in the Fox School of Business at Temple University, USA, has published articles in the areas of labour economics, public finance and the economics of sports. He is co-author (with Peter von Allmen) of The Economics of Sports (Boston, MA: Addison-Wesley, 2005).

Neil Longley, Associate Professor in the Isenberg School of Management at the University of Massachusetts, USA, has research interests in sports economics, public choice and international trade policy. He has published articles in a wide range of journals, including Contemporary Economic Policy, the Columbia Journal of World Business, Public Choice, the American Journal of Economics and Sociology and Canadian Public Policy.

Wolfgang Maennig, Professor of Economics at the University of Hamburg, Germany, was financial advisor for the Olympic bid campaigns of Berlin 2000 and Leipzig 2012. He researches and advises on the economics of doping, sport stadiums and sport leagues. He was Olympic Champion in Rowing in 1988 and holds the Olympic Order.

Daniel S. Mason, Associate Professor with the Faculty of Physical Education and Recreation and adjunct professor with the School of Business at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, Canada, focuses his research interests on professional sports franchises and events and the cities that host them.

Victor Matheson, Assistant Professor in the Department of Economics at the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, MA, USA, has published extensively regarding the economic impact of sporting events including studies of the Super Bowl, the NCAA Final Four, the FIFA World Cup and the Olympics. He also works as a soccer referee at the professional and collegiate levels.

John McMillan is the Jonathan B. Lovelace Professor of Economics in the Graduate School of Business, Stanford University, USA. He has written on economic theory and applied microeconomics, and is author of Reinventing the Bazaar: A Natural History of Markets (New York: Norton, 2002). His current research is on various aspects of development economics.
Gerd Muehlheusser, Assistant Professor at the Economics Department of Bern University, Switzerland, has published in sports economics on transfer fee regulations and the transfer system in European football in the European Economic Review and the Scandinavian Journal of Economics.

Jean-François Nys, Senior Lecturer at Limoges University, France, Director of the Institute ‘Management of services companies’, Researcher at the Centre for the Law and Economics of Sports, has written several books and articles on sports economics and health economics, and serves as a voluntary chair on local and regional sports bodies.

Susanne Parlasca, Deputy Director of the Bundeskartellamt’s Cartel division, joined the German competition authority in 1992 (among others, the media and sports rights division). In 1994/95 she worked with the European Commission’s Antitrust Directorate. She has published on sports economics and competition policy.

Sandrine Poupaux, Assistant Professor at the University Paris 1 Panthéon Sorbonne, Centre d’Economie de la Sorbonne, France, wrote her PhD dissertation entitled ‘Economic determinants of Olympic success at the nation level in the Eastern European countries between 1976 and 2004’.

Ian Preston, Professor of Economics at University College London, UK, and a Research Fellow at the Institute for Fiscal Studies, London, works predominantly on empirical questions in the economics of household behaviour, public policy and welfare measurement but has also published on optimum strategy in cricket.

Holger Preuss, Professor at the Faculty of Sports, Johannes Gutenberg-University in Mainz, Germany, teaches sports economics and sports management. He has been a consultant for several Olympic bid cities and sponsors. His research focuses on economic impacts of mega-sport events, especially the economics of hosting the Olympic Games from Munich 1972 to Beijing 2008.

Didier Primault, Economist at the Centre for the Law and Economics of Sports at Limoges University, France, has authored dozens of articles on sports economics and also specialises in labour law. He is the treasurer of the International Association of Sport Economists and has been the Director of the French Basketball Player Association and the General Secretary of the European Basketball Union (1989–97).

Joachim Prinz, Assistant Professor in the Department of Economics and Business Administration at the Witten-Herdecke University, Germany, conducts his research in the areas of the economics of education, the economics of professional sports and the economics of insurance.

Plácido Rodríguez, Professor of Economic Theory and Economics of Sports at the Department of Economics, Universidad de Oviedo, Spain, has co-authored two articles on sports economics in the Journal of Sports Economics and the European Sports Management Quarterly. He was the President of Real Sporting de Gijón Football Club between 1989 and 1992.

Gilles Rotillon, Professor of Economics at the University Paris 10, France, has published two contributions on the economics of climbing and mountaineering in two books Sports extrêmes, sportifs de l’extrême (Paris: Georg, 2002) and Deux siècles d’alpinismes (Paris: L’Harmattan, 2002).

Robert Sandy, Professor and chair of the Department of Economics, Indiana University Purdue of Indianapolis, USA, is a co-author (with P.J. Sloane and M. Rosentraub) of The Economics of Sport: An International Perspective (Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2004). His main interests are collegiate sports and modelling competitive balance. He has also written on occupational safety and health in journals such as the Journal of Human Resources, the Journal of Risk and Uncertainty, Economics Letters and Economica.

Rob Simmons, Senior Lecturer in Economics at Lancaster University Management School, UK, has published on various topics in sports economics in outlets such as the Journal of the Royal Statistical Society and the Scottish Journal of Political Economy and also serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Sports Economics. He is a qualified Football Association referee.

Peter J. Sloane, Research Professor and Director of the Welsh Economy and Labour Market Evaluation and Research Centre (WELMERC), Department of Economics, Swansea University, Wales, is also Professor Emeritus of the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, where he held the Jaffrey Chair of Political Economy and was Vice Principal and Dean of the Faculty of Social Sciences and Law. He is co-author (with R. Sandy and M. Rosentraub) of The Economics of Sport: An International Perspective (Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2004).

Stefan Szymanski, Professor of Economics at Tanaka Business School, Imperial College London, UK, has published extensively on the economics of sports. He has also been a consultant for a wide range of sporting and governmental bodies on economic issues relating to sport.

Rafael Tenorio, Professor of Economics at DePaul University in Chicago, Illinois, USA, was born in Lima, Peru, and graduated from the Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Maryland. His main areas of specialisation are applied microeconomics and game theory, and he has published several articles on auctions and bidding, natural experiments and the economics of sports.

Dennis Thomas, Senior Lecturer in Economics in the School of Management and Business at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth, has published widely on the economics of sport, and his research publications include articles on team production functions, player transfer markets and the determinants of attendance demand.

Frank Tolsdorf, Research Assistant in the Department of Economics and Business Administration at the Witten/Herdecke University, Germany, is currently finishing his dissertation on the economics of doping. He is founder of the laboratory for electronic gaming.

Wray Vamplew, Professor of Sports History and Director of Research in Sports Studies at the University of Stirling, Scotland, has published Mud, Sweat and Beers: A Cultural History of Sport and Alcohol (with Tony Collins; Oxford: Berg, 2002) and The Encyclopedia of British Horseracing (with Joyce Kay; London: Cass, 2004). His Pay Up and Play the Game: Professional Sport in Britain, 1875–1914 (originally published 1988), has been reissued by Cambridge University Press as a ‘classic’ work of history.

Andrew Zimbalist is Robert A. Woods Professor of Economics at Smith College Northampton, USA. His 18 books include Baseball and Billions: A Probing Look Inside the Big Business of Our National Pastime (New York: Basic Books, 1992), and his most recent book is In the Best Interests of Baseball? The Revolutionary Reign of Bud Selig (Wiley, 2006). He has also consulted widely in the sports industry.