References

de Ramos, A. (2003), ‘Minority revolt. Small investors in Asia are finally fighting for the respect they deserve’, CFO Asia, June.

EAAU (East Asia Analytical Unit) (1997), China Embraces the Market: Achievements, Constraints and Opportunities, Canberra: Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade.

EAAU (East Asia Analytical Unit) (1999), Asia’s Financial Markets. Capitalising on Reform, Barton, ACT: Commonwealth of Australia.

EAU (Economic Analytical Unit) (2002), China Embraces the World Market, Canberra: Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade.

Reforming China’s state-owned enterprises and banks

Huang, Y. (2001), China’s Last Steps across the River: Enterprise and Banking Reforms, Australia: Asia Pacific Press.

Huang, Y. and L. Song (1999), ‘State-owned enterprise and bank reform: conditions for liberalisation of China’s capital account’, presented at international conference on Reform and Recovery in East Asia: The Role of the State and Economic Enterprise, Australia National University, Canberra, September.

La Porta, R., F. Lopez-de-Silanes and A. Shleifer (1999), ‘Corporate ownership of commercial banks’, Journal of Finance, 57, 265–301.

Lin, J.Y., F. Cai and Z. Li (1999), Perfect Information and State Enterprise Reform, Shanghai: Shanghai Sanlian Bookstore and Shanghai People’s Press (in Chinese).

References

References

Scott, J. and E. Chanlett (1973), Planning the Research Interview, Chapel Hill, NC: University of North Carolina.
Standard & Poor’s (2004b), ‘Research: China (People’s Republic of), Singapore, 26 Feb’, www.ratingsdirect.com/Apps/rd/controller/Article?id=361912&type= &outputTyp.

Taylor, A. III (2004), ‘Shanghai Auto wants to be the world’s next great car company’, Fortune, 4 October, 51–8.

References

Wu, J. (1993), Large and Medium Size Enterprise Reform: Establishing Modern Enterprise Institutions, Tianjin: Tianjin People’s Press.

Zemin, J. (1997), ‘Hold high the great banner of Deng Xiaoping Theory for an all round advancement of the cause of building socialism with Chinese characteristics into the 21st century’, Beijing Review, 6–12 October, 10–33.

