

Contents

List of contributors	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Preface	xi
PART I INTRODUCTION
1 Work hours and work addiction Ronald J. Burke	3
2 How long? The historical, economic and cultural factors behind working hours and overwork Lonnie Golden	36
PART II DEFINITION AND CONSEQUENCES OF WORKAHOLISM
3 The workaholic breakdown syndrome Dr Barbara Killinger	61
4 Exploring new frontiers to generate an integrated definition of workaholism Lynley H. W. McMillan and Michael P. O'Driscoll	89
5 Understanding workaholism: the case for behavioral tendencies Peter E. Mudrack	108
PART III ANTECEDENTS AND TYPES OF WORKAHOLICS
6 Making sense of temporal organizational boundary control Graeme MacDermid	131
7 Economic and employment conditions, karoshi (work to death) and the trend of studies on workaholism in Japan Atsuko Kanai	158

8	Workaholic types: it's not how hard you work but why and how you work hard Ronald J. Burke	173
9	Dr Jekyll or Mr Hyde? On the differences between work engagement and workaholism Wilmar B. Schaufeli, Toon W. Taris and Arnold B. Bakker	193
PART IV ADDRESSING WORK HOURS AND WORKAHOLISM
10	'Decent working time': balancing the needs of workers and employers Jon C. Messenger	221
11	The unlikely referral of workaholics to an employee assistance program Gayle Porter and Robert A. Herring III	242
12	Career success and personal failure: a developing need to find balance Ronald J. Burke and Teal McAteer-Early	270
13	Exploring career and personal outcomes and the meaning of career success among part-time professionals in organizations Mary Dean Lee, Pamela Lirio, Fahri Karakas, Shelley M. MacDermid, Michelle L. Buck and Ellen Ernst Kossek	284
14	Improving work–life balance: REBT for workaholic treatment Charles P. Chen	310
15	Spiritual leadership theory as a source for future theory, research, and recovery from workaholism Louis W. Fry, Laura L. Matherly and Steve Vitucci	330
	Index	353