Contributors

Helene Ahl holds a PhD degree from Jönköping International Business School in Sweden, an ME degree from Lund University and an MBA from the Anderson Graduate School of Management at UCLA. She is a Research Fellow at the National Centre for Lifelong Learning (www.encell.se) at the School of Education and Communication at Jönköping University. Her research focuses on learning, from individual, organizational and institutional perspectives. At present she is engaged in a discourse analysis of the concept ‘lifelong learning’, and her latest publication was a critical literature review of the motivation concept. She has also published within feminist theory and entrepreneurship. Her book The Scientific Reproduction of Gender Inequality received an award at the Critical Management Studies division of the Academy of Management in 2003.

Daniel Arenas is Assistant Professor of the Department of Social Sciences at ESADE Business School. He holds an PhD and an MA from the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago, a degree in Philosophy from the University of Barcelona and a diploma from the Program of Executive Development at ESADE. He teaches courses on sociology and business ethics, and also coordinates the Program ‘Vicens Vives – Leadership and Civic Commitment’ and the humanities courses for undergraduates at ESADE. He has done research in the area of business ethics and corporate social responsibility as well as in aesthetics and political theory. Among the most recent publications are: (with Josep M. Lozano and Alfons Sauquet) ‘Educational Programs in CSR’ in José Allouche (ed.), EFMD-Book on Corporate Social Responsibility, Palgrave McMillan (forthcoming Spring 2005); (with Josep M. Lozano and Conxita Folguer) ‘Setting the Context: The Role of Information Technology in an Business Ethics Course Based on Face-to-Face Dialogue’, Journal of Business Ethics 48, 99–111 (2003), and ‘Per què ens importa l’art? El trencaclósques de l’estètica i els valors’, IDEES Revista de temes contemporanis, 2004, 21, 34–45.

Barbara Czarniawska holds a Swedish Research Council/Malmsten Foundation Chair in Management Studies at Gothenburg Research Institute, School of Economics and Commercial Law, Göteborg University, Sweden. Her research takes a constructionist perspective on organizing, most recently in the field of big city management and finance. She applies narratology to organization studies. Her recent English books are A Tale of Three Cities (Oxford University Press, 2002), and Narratives in Social Science Research (Sage, 2004). Czarniawska is a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences, the Swedish Royal Engineering Academy, and the Royal Society of Art and Sciences in Gothenburg. She received the Wihuri International Prize ‘in recognition of creative work that has specially furthered and developed the cultural and economic progress of mankind’ in 2003.

Niels Dechow is a Lecturer in Management Studies (Accounting) at the Saïd Business School – University of Oxford. Before joining Saïd, he worked in the Danish consulting industry for Deloitte Consulting and KPMG Consulting and later in the United States as Assistant Professor of Accounting at Case Western Reserve University. His current research is based on empirical studies focusing on the implementation and coordination of new management control technologies, concepts and procedures; the (lack of) interaction of consultants and practitioners in transforming management projects into practice; and associated with this, the role of the business school in shaping modern notions of ‘good management’.

Pasquale Gagliardi is Professor of Sociology of Organization at the Catholic University of Milan, and Managing Director of ISTUD – Istituto Studi Direzionali. Before launching his academic career, he worked as a consultant with many large Italian corporations. During the 1980s he contributed to the foundation and development in Europe of SCOS, the Standing Conference on Organizational Symbolism. His present research focuses on the relationship between culture, aesthetic knowledge and organizational order. He has widely published books and articles on these topics in Italian and English. Among his publications: Le imprese come culture (Isedi, 1986); Symbols and Artifacts: Views of the Corporate Landscape (de Gruyter, 1990); Studies of Organizations in the European Tradition (Jai Press, 1995), co-edited with Sam Bacharach and Bryan Mundell; Narratives We Organize By (Benjamins, 2003), co-edited with Barbara Czarniawska. Professor Gagliardi is at present Secretary General of the Giorgio Cini Foundation in Venice. He also serves on the Editorial Boards of Organization Studies and Organization.

Silvia Gherardi is Professor of Sociology of Work and Organization at the University of Trento, Italy, where she is responsible for the Research Unit on Cognition, Organizational Learning and Aesthetics (RUCOLA). Her research activities focus on workplace learning and knowing. Her theoretical background is in qualitative sociology, organizational symbolism, and feminist studies. Her most recent book The Texture of Organizational Knowledge (Blackwell, 2006) is devoted to the theme of the circulation of knowledge.
John Hendry is a Fellow of Girton College, University of Cambridge, and Professor of Management at the University of Reading. He holds degrees in mathematics (from Cambridge) and history (from London) and has written extensively on intellectual history as well as on business and management. Having worked in both the public and the private sectors, he joined the faculty of the London Business School in 1984, and has since held positions at Cranfield School of Management, Birkbeck College and the University of Cambridge’s Judge Institute of Management, where he was director of the MBA Course from 1990–1998. His current research is on the CEO’s job in large listed companies and his most recent book is Between Ethics and Enterprise: Business and Management in a Bimoral Society (Oxford University Press, 2004).

Daniel Hjorth is Associate Professor of Management and Entrepreneurship at Växjö and Malmö Universities and senior researcher at ESBRI in Stockholm. His previously published works include Rewriting Entrepreneurship – for a new perspective on organisational creativity; New Movements in Entrepreneurship; Narrative and Discursive Approaches in Entrepreneurship; and Entrepreneurship as Social Change, the latter three being part of a mini-series of four books for which Hjorth has written and worked as editor (together with Chris Steyaert). Hjorth’s publications in journals (such as Journal of Management Inquiry, Journal of Management Education, or Human Relations) display an attempt to make literary studies affect our understanding of creative organizational life.

Anthony G. Hopwood is the Peter Moores Dean of the Saïd Business School, the American Standard Companies Professor of Operations Management, and Student of Christ Church at the University of Oxford. Educated at the London School of Economics and the University of Chicago, prior to moving to Oxford in 1995 Professor Hopwood had held professorships at the London Business School and the London School of Economics. He was also the President of the European Institute for Advanced Studies in Management, Brussels from 1995 to 2003. A prolific author, Professor Hopwood is also Editor-in-Chief of the major international research journal, Accounting, Organizations and Society. He has served as a consultant to commercial, governmental and international organizations. Professor Hopwood holds honorary doctorates from universities in Denmark, Finland, Italy, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

Keith Hoskin is Professor of Strategy and Accounting at Warwick Business School. He was initially trained in the humanities in Europe, studying ancient Greek and Latin, and medieval and modern Greek, as an undergraduate. He then went a more social science route as a graduate student in the USA, taking an MSc in Educational Psychology. In his PhD thesis he split the difference by undertaking a historical–theoretical study of rhetoric as educational practice in ancient Greece and Rome. In his subsequent research career he has drawn on both humanities and social science traditions, in particular studying how past educational practices are sedimented in our present ways of learning, acting and thinking. He is currently using this syncretist approach to attempt to understand the nature of, and interplay between, past and present structures, processes and contents in the fields of education, accounting and management. Where possible he looks to use this approach to identify dysfunctional outcomes and suggest less dysfunctional alternatives: as here.

Karin Knorr Cetina is Professor of Sociology at the University of Constance (DE), Visiting Professor at the University of Chicago, and a member of the Institute for World-Society Studies, University of Bielefeld, Germany. In addition to her three degrees, she has received several honors, including Vienna University’s Fellowship for the Gifted, and she was a Ford Foundation Post-Doctoral Fellow, a member of the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, President of the International Society for Social Studies of Science, and she is a future member of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences in Palo Alto, CA. She has published numerous papers and books, including Epistemic Cultures: How the Sciences Make Knowledge (Harvard University Press, 1999), which received the Ludwik Fleck Prize of the Society for Social Studies of Science and the Robert K. Merton Prize of the American Sociological Association.

Carl Rhodes is Associate Professor of Organization Studies at the School of Management, University of Technology, Sydney. He is author of Writing Organization (Benjamins, 2001), co-author of Reconstructing the Lifelong Learner (Routledge, 2003) and co-editor of Research and Knowledge at Work (Routledge, 2000). His current research focuses on identity at work, the ethics of managing, and organizations in popular culture.

Michel Serres was born in 1930 in Agen, France. In 1949, he went to naval college and subsequently, in 1952, to the Ecole Normale Supérieure (rue d’Ulm). In 1955, he obtained an agrégation in philosophy, and from 1956 to 1958 he served on a variety of ships as a marine officer for the French national maritime service. His vocation of voyaging is therefore of more than academic import. In 1968, Serres gained a doctorate for a thesis on Leibniz’s philosophy. During the 1960s he taught with Michel Foucault at the Universities of Clermont-Ferrand and Vincennes and was later appointed to a chair in the history of science at the Sorbonne, where he still teaches. Serres has also been a full professor at Stanford University since 1984, and he was elected to the French Academy in 1990. Through his explorations of the parallel developments of scientific, philosophical, and literary trends, Michel Serres has built a reputation as one of modern France’s most gifted and original thinkers.
Ken Starkey is Professor of Management at Nottingham University Business School. His research interests include: strategy and learning, the theory and practice of strategy and organization, organization development, and management education. He is author of 10 books, including How Organisations Learn (International Thomson Press, 2004 – with Sue Tempest and Alan McKinlay), and of about 60 articles in journals such as Sociology, Strategic Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Journal of Management Studies, Human Relations, Organization Studies and Organization Science. He is former Chair of the British Academy of Management Research Committee and author of a number of reports on the future of management research and management education. He is currently Principal Investigator on an Economic and Social Research Council project ‘The Dynamics of Knowledge Production in the Business School’.

Chris Steyaert is Professor of Organizational Psychology at the University of St Gallen. After receiving his doctoral dissertation in Psychology from the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (Belgium), he was connected to the Institute of Organization and Industrial Sociology, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark and to the Entrepreneurship and Small Business Research Institute (ESBRI), Stockholm, Sweden. He has published in international journals and books in the area of entrepreneurship and organizational innovation. His research themes include organizing creativity, diversity management and difference, language and translation, forms of performing/writing research and the politics of entrepreneurship and human organizing.

Sue Tempest is Senior Lecturer of Strategic Management at Nottingham University Business School. Her research interests include organizational learning, social capital and new forms of organization, management education and the impact of demographic ageing on strategic management. She has published in journals such as Organization Studies, Organization Science, Human Relations, and Journal of Management Studies.

Lars Vissing initially served in the MFA in Copenhagen and in Danish embassies in Lisbon (1976–79) and Rome (1984–88). Multilateral assignments includes the CSCE (1973–74) in Geneva, and later (1982–83) the GATT, now WTO, also in Geneva. Before taking on the OCSE Chairmanship as Ambassador and Head of the Danish Delegation to the OCSE in Vienna (1996–2001), in 1997, he served five years (1991–96) as DCM and Minister to Bonn. In 2001 he was appointed Ambassador of Denmark to Moscow, and is also accredited to Belarus and the five Central Asian States. Beyond contributions to different reviews on Political Science and History he has published elements of his research on the Italian Renaissance (Machiavel et la Politique de l’Apparence, PUF, 1986). Lars Vissing studied in Paris, Copenhagen and Rome. He holds a Doctor’s degree (dr. Phil.) from the University of Copenhagen (1984).