Acknowledgements

I have enjoyed the help and support of many people and institutions in putting this book together. I am grateful to all the people in business schools around Europe who have generously shared their experiences, thoughts and opinions about the rankings and about their business schools with me. I am also grateful to the journalists who have taken time to explain their rankings and to tell their side of the story to me.

I have benefited greatly from the thoughtful advice and intellectual support of Lars Engwall and Kerstin Sahlin-Andersson. As my dissertation advisors, they have carefully guided this work through the various stages, and have provided both criticisms and endless support and encouragement. Kerstin has provided invaluable inputs in the final stages of revising this work into a book. I am greatly indebted to Walter Powell for putting forward intriguing questions and wise comments at my dissertation seminar, and for his encouragement to publish this book. I also want to express my thanks to colleagues and friends at the Department of Business Studies at Uppsala University for constructive criticisms and inspiration, particularly Stefan Jonsson for his insightful comments on various drafts of this manuscript and to Tina Hedmo for inspiring collaboration. Special thanks also to my partner, Lars, for his patience and his support.

I have had the opportunity to present this study and drafts of the manuscript at seminars and workshops around the world, which have given me valuable insights for this book. I particularly thank Royston Greenwood, Marc Ventresca, and Kerstin Sahlin-Andersson for these opportunities.

Financial support for this research is gratefully acknowledged from several sources. Uppsala University and the Department of Business Studies, and the ‘Jan Wallander and Tom Hedelius Foundation’ have provided financial support for my doctoral and post-doctoral work. This study has also been part of the research projects ‘Creation of European Management Practice’, financed by the European Commission, and ‘Transnational Regulation and the Transformation of States’, financed by the Swedish Research Council.
