

Contributors

John Cantwell is Professor of International Business at Rutgers University (USA), and Professor of International Economics at the University of Reading (UK). He has also been a Visiting Professor at the University of Rome (La Sapienza), the University of the Social Sciences, Toulouse (France), and the University of Economics and Business Administration, Vienna (Austria). He was the President of the European International Business Academy (EIBA) in 1992. In 2001 he was elected as one of four EIBA Founding Fellows, and in 2002 became the first Secretary of the EIBA Fellows. Professor Cantwell is also an Associate Editor of the Journal of Economic Behavior and Organization.

Bruno Cassiman is an Associate Professor of Economics and Strategy at the IESE Business School, University of Navarra, Spain. He earned a PhD in Managerial Economics and Decision Sciences from the Kellogg School of Management of Northwestern University, USA, and has a degree in commercial engineering and management from the Catholic University of Leuven (Belgium). Before joining the General Management department at IESE Business School, Bruno Cassiman was Professor of Economics and Strategy at the University Pompeu Fabra in Barcelona. Professor Cassiman's research interests lie in the area of Economics of Strategy and Innovation Strategy and the Economics of Innovation. He has written a number of articles on issues of innovation for a variety of academic journals including The American Economic Review, Management Science, The European Economic Review, The International Journal of Industrial Organization, Managerial and Decision Economics, and Research Policy.

Massimo G. Colombo is Full Professor of Economics of Technical Change at Politecnico di Milano (Italy). His main research interests are in Industrial Economics, the Economics of Innovation and Strategic Management. His areas of research include the diffusion of advanced technologies, strategic alliances, the relation between firm organization and technical change, the dynamics of Information and Communication Technology (ICT) industries, and the organization and strategies of new technology-based firms. Professor Colombo has participated in numerous applied research projects, promoted by the European Union, the Consiglio Nazionale delle Ricerche (CNR), the Italian Ministry of Research, among others. He has published numerous books and articles in journals such as the Cambridge Journal of Economics, Economic Letters, Industrial and Corporate Change, Information Economics and Policy, the Journal of Banking and Finance, the Journal of Economic Behavior and Organisation, the Journal of Economics and Management Strategy, the Journal of Industrial Economics, the International Journal of Industrial Organisation, Research Policy, Small Business Economics, the Strategic Management Journal and others.

Paola Garrone is Full Professor of Business Economics at Politecnico di Milano (Italy), where she has been on the faculty since 1996. Her research interests are in Industrial Economics and Economics of Technological Innovation. Paola Garrone has published several papers on the economics of telecommunications and ICTs. She has taken part in, and co-ordinated, research contracts from business and public agencies.

Veerle Minne has a background in Applied Economics and a professional experience of 10 years. She works with IDEA Consult, a research-based consultancy firm located in Brussels, as Senior Consultant. She is involved in various evaluation tasks, dealing both with economic policy instruments and programmes, e.g. in the framework of the European Structural Funds. Veerle also has broad experience in economic impact studies and sector analyses.

Tom Pellens graduated in Economics at the University of Leuven (Belgium) and obtained a post-graduate degree in Financial and Fiscal Science at the University of Antwerp (Netherlands). For several years he was active in the banking sector in the Netherlands and in Belgium. At the time of this study, he worked at IDEA Consult as Senior Consultant, specializing in research and policy advice related to urban and regional development. Tom was involved in several evaluations of regional and urban development programmes and economic policy instruments. Since September 2004 he has been active in the field of international cooperation in Bolivia.

Dafne Reymen obtained her PhD in Economics at Stanford University (USA) analyzing the 'Economic impact of aid provided to Western-Europe after World War II. Lessons for Eastern-Europe?'. Dafne Reymen has worked for IDEA Consult since January 2000. She combines her activities as Senior Consultant for IDEA Consult with a position as Visiting Professor in EHSAL, College for Economics in Brussels. She is mainly active in the domain of regional and urban development as well as social policy research. She has extensive experience and expertise in the monitoring and evaluation of policy instruments, in programmes and projects related to the European Structural Funds, and in projects requiring extensive data and econometric analysis.

Grazia D. Santangelo is Associate Professor of Economics at the University of Catania (Italy). Her research interests concern corporate geography and specialization of technological development in high-tech industries, inter-firm technological development, innovation and labour organizational practices, the dynamics of ICT industry in Europe. In her most recent work, she has also explored the activity of multinational corporations in the regional dimension within the European context. Professor Santangelo has been a visiting academic at Reading University (UK) and Rutgers University (USA) and has participated in applied research projects, promoted by the EU and the Italian Ministry of Research. In 2004, she was elected Italian national representative of the European International Business Academy (EIBA) Board. She has published books and articles in journals such as the Journal of Evolutionary Economics, Research Policy, Information Economics and Policy, International Business Review, Regional Studies, Economics of Innovation and New Technology, Transnational Corporations, International Journal of the Economics of Business, among others.

Leo Sleuwaegen was born in 1955 in Brussels. After studying at the University of Leuven (Belgium) and Harvard University (Cambridge, USA), he obtained his PhD in Economics from the Catholic University Leuven in 1984. His dissertation, entitled 'Location and Investment Decisions by Multinational Enterprises' was awarded 'Best doctoral dissertation' by the Academy of International Business, New York, in 1985.

Currently, he is Professor of Managerial Economics at the Catholic University of Leuven, Research Director of the Vlerick Leuven Gent Management School in Belgium and part-time Professor at the Erasmus University of Rotterdam. He has recently been a Visiting Professor at College d'Europe, Bruges, New York University, University of California (Irvine), Bocconi University (Milan) and the Université de Paris I (Panthéon-Sorbonne).

As expert-consultant, he has worked for the European Commission, World Bank, OECD, United Nations, the Belgian and Flemish governments and major international companies.

Leo Sleuwaegen publishes regularly in international journals and is associate editor of the International Journal of the Economics of Business.

Geert Steurs obtained a PhD in Economics in 1994 at the Catholic University of Leuven (Belgium) on the topic 'Spillovers and Cooperation in R&D'. Today, he works for IDEA Consult, a research-based consultancy firm located in Brussels. As a project manager, he is in charge of projects in the field of 'Markets and Strategy' for both public and private, and national as well as international clients. Geert is also a Visiting Professor at the Catholic University of Leuven. He has published several articles in journals such as the International Journal of Industrial Organisation, Economics of Innovation and New Technology, the Australian Journal of Labour Economics and the Journal of European Social Policy.

Masako Ueda is an Assistant Professor of Financial Economics at the School of Business, University of Wisconsin (Madison, USA). She is also a Research Affiliate of the Centre of Economic Policy Research (CEPR) in London and a Principal at the Faculty of Initiatives of Studies in Technology Entrepreneurship (INSITE) at the University of Wisconsin (Madison, USA). Professor Ueda's research is mainly in the areas of new firm start-ups and venture capital. She has published in the Journal of Finance and the Journal of Political Economy, among others. Professor Ueda has a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics from Kyoto University (Japan), and a PhD in Economics from the University of Tokyo. Prior to joining the faculty at the University of Wisconsin in 2001, she was a visiting student at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania (USA) between 1994–97, and an Assistant Professor at the Universitat Pompeu Fabra (Spain), between 1997–01.

Giovanni Valentini is an Assistant Professor at Bocconi University, Milan, and holds a PhD in Management at IESE Business School (Spain). His research interests lie at the intersection of strategy and innovation management. He is interested in strategic decisions in research and development (R&D), in the effective management of the innovation process, and in the reinforcing linkages between firms' corporate strategy, business strategy and innovation strategy.

Professor Dr Reinhilde Veugelers has been with K.U. Leuven (Belgium), since 1985, where she obtained her PhD in Economics in 1990 with a thesis on 'Scope decisions of Multinational Enterprises'. She is currently Economic Advisor to the European Commission, BEPA, a full professor at the Department of Applied Economics at K.U. Leuven, where she teaches managerial economics and international business economics and a CEPR Research Fellow. She was a visiting scholar at Kellogg Graduate School of Management (Northwestern University, USA), at the Sloan School of Management (MIT, USA), Stern Business School (NYU, USA) and Visiting Professor at UCL (Belgium), ECARES/UL (Brussels), Paris I (France), UPF and UAB Barcelona, UMaastrecht. With her research concentrated in the fields of industrial organization, international economics and strategy and innovation, she has authored numerous publications on multinationals, R&D strategies and cooperation, trade policy and market integration in leading international journals.