My sincere gratitude goes to my wife, Iftu Dorose, who has shouldered the burden of taking care of our kids while I was writing this book. I owe a lot to my boys, Solan and Yeron, for they were abundantly patient with me – ‘Dada is working’, as Solan says. I acknowledge the financial support provided by the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at the University of Minnesota Duluth for the acquisition of data employed in the later chapters of this book.

I am grateful to the Committee on Grants at Franklin & Marshall College for their financial support. A special word of thanks is in order for my wife, Michelle Espaldon, for her patience, caring support and loving friendship.
