I am in debt to a lot of friends, colleagues and students who have provided a lot of support in my research programme. Thank you to all those who have contributed to papers and other material that form the basis of this book.

My colleagues at Organisation Studies and the Tilburg Sustainability Center of Tilburg University have discussed my work with me and motivated and advised me to answer questions that are important for understanding organizations and societies.

All of my demanding students in the Organisation Studies Bachelor Program, my Masters Students in the organizational responsibility section as well as the doctoral workshop participants at many EBEN conferences have triggered me to always provide the best teaching possible on CSR and, by doing so, have forced me to understand and communicate the material.

Rob Jansen helped me in collecting and analysing literature that I used in Chapter 2 of this volume. Pieter van Beurden worked with me on research related to Chapter 4. Another output of that has been published as van Beurden and Gössling (2008). Chapter 5 uses material of a project with Chris Vocht, which is published as Vocht and Gössling (2007). Timmi van Maldegem and Willemijn Wijenberg provided great support by collecting and analysing the data for Chapters 6 (Timmi) and 7 (Willemijn). Patty Janssen and Toon Bullens have provided input for Chapter 8. Another report of our joint research is published as Janssen, Gössling and Bullens (2001). Finally, Rogier Havelar supported me with the collection of material for Chapter 9.

Thank you all for your input, for critically discussing my work and for the fruitful collaboration!

Furthermore, I need to mention that the thoughts of Chapter 3 have been published as Gössling (2003).

Also other friends and co-authors discussed themes and pieces of this book with me. Thank you, Gijs van den Heuvel and Sjo Soeters, for our collaboration in another research related to this project. Thank you, W.

Michael Hoffman, for being an inspiration and supportive colleague for almost two decades already.

Thank you, Francine O'Sullivan, for the wonderful collaboration and the great support, for the second time.

A personal note: Natascha, thanks for all the love and support; Benjamin, Aurelia, thank you for reminding me of those things that are even more fun than research; Floris and Vincent, thank you for being there.
