Acknowledgements

This book would not have been possible without the effort and support of a number of people and organizations. The editors would like to thank Jean Pierre Sabourin of the Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation, Professor Julio Faundez of the Warwick Law School, Rebecca Probert, Director of the Warwick Legal Research Institute, Anthony Neuberger and Mark Salmon from the Warwick Business School for their personal and financial support of the Banking Law Symposium on Managing Systemic Risk held at the University of Warwick on 7–9 April 2010.

Most of the chapters were drawn from papers delivered at the Banking Law Symposium. We are grateful and thank all of the speakers, presenters and discussants for their contributions and participation. The moderators did a super job and the attendees at the Symposium are thanked for their observations and questions that helped to improve the focus of all of our work. Charles Enoch did an outstanding job in summarizing the Symposium, which we have included as the Foreword to this book. We very much appreciated the assistance of Andrew Jerijian in preparing the chapters.

We appreciate the help of Rose Le-Breton Bagley and Jennifer Wilson of University of Warwick, School of Law, who co-ordinated and provided the essential administrative support to the Symposium. We also acknowledge the efforts of Ben Booth, our commissioning editor, from Edward Elgar Publishing.

Ray LaBrosse would like to thank his mother, Frances, his wife, Gail, as well as Kendra, Scott, and Conrad for their patience. He also thanks Dale Christensen and Ken Paterson for their friendship over so many years.

Rodrigo Olivares-Caminal would like to thank Teresa and Felipe for their love and support; and, my co-organizers and Rosa M. Lastra for their friendship.

Dalvinder Singh would like to thank Sarbjit, Amaryn and Arvind for their love and support.
