The authors

Jon L. Pierce is Professor of Organization and Management in the Department of Management Studies at the Labovitz School of Business and Economics, University of Minnesota Duluth (UMD), USA. He received his Ph.D. in management and organizational studies at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. In 2005 Pierce was named one of the University of Minnesota's Horace T. Morse Distinguished Professors in recognition of excellence in teaching, research, and advising in the areas of management and organizational studies. In the same year he received the UMD Chancellor's Award for Outstanding Research. His research focuses on the psychology of work and organizations with a recent interest focused on organization-based self-esteem and psychological ownership. Pierce has co-authored and edited seven different books, and published and presented more than seventy articles. He is a member of the Academy of Management, was inducted into their Journals Hall of Fame in 2000, and has served on the editorial review board for several journals (for example, Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Management, and the Scandinavian Management Journal).

Iiro Jussila is Professor of Management and Organization in the Department of Management and International Business at the School of Business, Lappeenranta University of Technology, Finland. He earned his Doctorate in Science (Economics and Business Administration) at Lappeenranta University of Technology. Jussila is also the Head of Degree Programmes overseeing the Bachelor's and Master's programs at his business school. His research is focused on 'collective being' in general and on topics such as collective psychological ownership, collective territoriality, and collective entrepreneurship (for example, co-operatives, family businesses) in particular. Jussila has published about twenty academic articles and about thirty of his manuscripts have been presented at international conferences. He has served as a supervisor of doctoral students at Lappeenranta University of Technology and a mentor of academics in other universities. Jussila is a member of the Academy of Management, the International Family Enterprise Research Academy, and the Nordic Academy of Management, and he has served in a variety of editorial roles for several journals (for example, International Journal of Co-operative Management and Scandinavian Journal of Management). As part of his pro-education activities in Finland, he is serving as the Chairman of the Board for the Co-op Network Studies.