Many many people have helped me in the preparation of this book.

I have been honoured to discuss my research with many colleagues throughout the world: Professor Hector MacQueen, Dr Robert Lane, Professor Steven Anderman, Professor Paul Torremans, Professor Alison Firth, Professor Chris Marsden, Professor SK Verma, Dr Kimberlee Weatherill, Professor Peter Drahos, Dr Christopher Stothers, Pat Treacy, Jennifer Holroyd, Kenneth Campbell, Jim Cormack, Graeme Colquhoun, Dr James Harrison, Professor Keith Culver, Professor David Castle, Nicolas Lockhart, Lea Bishop Shaver, Nagla Rizk, Ren Reynolds and above all Professor Charlotte Waelde. I gained a great deal from stimulating discussions at events held by the AHRC Research Centre for Studies in Intellectual Property and Technology Law, University of Edinburgh as part of the ‘Intellectual Property, Competition and Human Rights’ project, held in Edinburgh in December 2004 and March 2006. Thank you also to the Modern Law Review, British Academy, Christie Law Fellowship, Clark Foundation for Legal Education, and the School of Law of the University of Edinburgh for their funding support.

My academic work has a strong base in the 10 years I spent as a litigator in London, Melbourne and Edinburgh and I must thank the following, for whose work and knowledge I have the utmost respect, for inspiring and maintaining my interest in IP, competition and human rights: Charters Macdonald-Brown, Fiona Russell, Heidi Hurdle, Eleanor Scacco, Mary Padbury, Bill Reid, Grant Fisher, Belinda Findlay, Peter Chalk, Maddi Lawrence, Jim Cormack, Seona Burnett and Graeme Colquhoun. The University of Edinburgh, and in particular the SCRIPT centre, provided valued scholarly support and a welcoming community and I thank in particular Professor Charlotte Waelde, Professor Graeme Laurie, Professor Hector MacQueen, Professor Burkhard Schafer, Professor Douglas Brodie, Professor Lesley McAra, Professor Niamh Nic Shuibne, Andres Guadamuz, Judith Rauhofer, Dr Smita Kheria, Jane Cornwell, Dr Gillian Black, Dr Anna Souhami, Dr Elisa Morgera, Erin Jackson, Claire Neilson, Nadine Eriksson Smith, Dr Lisa Kendall and Morag Cherry, all of whom I will miss as I look forward to my new role at the University of Aberdeen. To my researchers over the years, Katie Fitzgerald, Wendy van der Neut, Harriet

Wybor and Orianna Farley, and also to my students – real and virtual – over the years (in particular the Oxford IP Moot teams of 2009) again, many thanks. Thank you also to Claire Kyle and to all the team at Edward Elgar, in particular Ben Booth, John-Paul MacDonald, Laura Seward, Elizabeth Clack and Rebecca Wise for all their support and guidance.

Thanks also to friends and family for all their support, in particular Brian, Christine, Heather, Richard and Douglas Lockhart, Katie Chapman, Kate Beaton, Vanessa King, Louise Hobbs, Charlotte Carty, Mike Scott, Mike Allan, Vicki Antipatis, Liz Mosin, Wendy Harris, Eleanor Scacco, Louisa Macdonell, Nicola Hudson, Karen Sawyer, Joy Eldridge, Susan Bryce and Margaret Ogilvie.

And above all, thank you to Robbie, Hamish and Ross; again, without whom …
