Contributors

William K. Carroll’s research interests are in the areas of the political economy of corporate capitalism, social movements and social change, and critical social theory and method. A member of the Sociology Department at the University of Victoria since 1981, and a founding participant in the Graduate Program in Cultural, Social and Political Thought, he currently directs UVic’s Interdisciplinary Minor/Diploma Program in Social Justice Studies. Recent books include The Making of a Transnational Capitalist Class (Zed Books, 2010) and Corporate Power in a Globalizing World (Oxford University Press, revised edition 2010).

Bruce Cronin is Head of the Department of International Business and Economics at the University of Greenwich, London. He is Director of the University’s Centre for Business Network Analysis, Secretary of the UK Social Networks Association and Editor of the journal Business Networks.

Eric Grémont is Chair of the Observatoire Politico-Economique des Structures du Capitalisme, Paris, a non-profit organization dedicated to studying elites and corporate change in Europe. He develops corporate and elite network analysis, financial appraisal of firms, and socio-economic processes of standardization. About French elites, he recently co-edited with François-Xavier Dudouet Les grands patrons français: Du capitalisme d’Etat à la financierisation (Lignes de Repères, 2010). His previous studies on the Eurozone’s elites (with his co-authors François-Xavier Dudouet and Antoine Vion) were published in the Electronic Journal of Radical Organizations Theory.

Georgina Murray and John Scott - 9780857935526
Downloaded from Elgar Online at 07/03/2019 02:35:35AM
via free access

Jerry Harris is Professor of History at DeVry University, Chicago. He is author of The Dialectics of Globalization: Economic and Political Conflict in a Transnational World (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2006), National Secretary of the Global Studies Association of North America and a founding member of the Network for Critical Studies on Global Capitalism.

Georgina Murray is Associate Professor in Humanities, at Griffith University, in the Centre for Work, Organisation and Wellbeing. She lectures in Political Economy. Her current projects include: an extensive survey funded by the Australian Research Council and the CFMEU on the wellbeing of miners and their partners; a union delegates networks project in conjunction with the ACTU; and a corporate responsibility and sustainability project. She is the author of Capitalist Networks and Social Power in Australia and New Zealand (Ashgate, 2006), co-author of Women of the Coal Rushes (UNSW Press, 2010) and author of numerous academic articles, papers and reports.

David Peetz is Professor of Employment Relations at Griffith University, in the Centre for Work, Organisation and Wellbeing. He previously worked at the Australian National University and in the then Commonwealth Department of Industrial Relations, spending over five years in its Senior Executive Service. He has been a consultant for the International Labour Organization in Thailand, Malaysia and China, and undertaken work for unions, employers and governments of both political persuasions. He is the author of Unions in a Contrary World (Cambridge University Press, 1998) and Brave New Workplace (Allen & Unwin, 2006), co-author of Women of the Coal Rushes (UNSW Press, 2010) and author of numerous academic articles, papers and reports.

Alejandra Salas-Porras is Professor at the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM), Faculty of Social and Political Science. Research interests include elites and development on the national and regional levels, the political economy of development, region formation and development, business and corporate networks, and transnational corporations and their spheres of influence. Most recent publications include Las Elites y el Desarrollo (SITESA-FCPYS-UNAM, 2009, edited with Karla Valverde), ’Bases of support and opposition for the return of a developmental state in Mexico’, in Ponto de Vista, Perspectivas sobre o Desenvolvimento, 2009, and ¿Quién gobierna América del Norte? Elites, redes y organizaciones (forthcoming, edited with Matilde Luna Ledesma).
John Scott is Professor of Sociology and Pro Vice-Chancellor for Research at Plymouth University, UK. He has previously taught at Essex University, Leicester University and Strathclyde University. His most recent books include Conceptualising the Social World (Cambridge University Press, 2011) and The Sage Handbook of Social Network Analysis (Sage Publications, 2011, edited with Peter Carrington).

Clifford L. Staples is Professor of Sociology at the University of North Dakota, USA. He received his Ph.D. from Washington State University in 1985. His research interests focus on transnational corporations, global capitalism, and globalization. His Power, Profits, and Patriarchy: The Social Organization of Work at a British Metal Trades Firm, 1792–1922 (with William G. Staples) won an award from the American Sociological Association in 2003. He has published papers in the Sociological Quarterly, the Journal of Historical Sociology, Sociological Perspectives, Corporate Governance: An International Review, the International Journal of Health Services, Social Thought and Research, and Rethinking Marxism, among others. He is currently researching the tensions between transnational corporations and nation states, and transnational class formation.

Anthony van Fossen teaches Social Sciences and is a member of the Griffith Asia Institute at Griffith University in Brisbane, Australia. He has conducted long-term research on the international political economy of the Pacific Islands, especially the region’s tax havens. He is the author of Tax Havens and Sovereignty in the Pacific Islands, the first book on offshore financial centres in Oceania (University of Queensland Press, 2012) and of South Pacific Futures: Oceania toward 2050, the first comprehensive survey of expert views of the region’s future. His work has been extensively cited in academic publications, and he is on the Editorial Advisory Board of the Open Criminology Journal. His views have been quoted extensively in Time magazine, the New York Times, the International Herald Tribune, the Australian Financial Review and Islands Business, and he has appeared as an expert commentator on TVNZ and radio programmes of the Australian Broadcasting Corporation.

Antoine Vion is Assistant Professor at the Aix-Marseille University, and a member of the LEST/LabexMed, Aix-en-Provence. His work covers the multi-level dynamics of regional integration, corporate and elite networks, and socio-economic processes of standardization. He has published papers in international journals such as International Politics, the International Journal of Public Policy, Contemporary European History, the Bulletin of Sociological Methodology, and the Critical Review of International Social and Political Philosophy. His previous studies on the Eurozone’s financial elites (with his co-authors François-Xavier Dudouet and Eric Grémont) were published in the Electronic Journal of Radical Organization Theory and in the book Travail et compétences dans la mondialisation: Les dynamiques sociétales en question (Armand Colin, Recherches, 2012), which he co-edited with Ariel Mendez and Robert Tchobanian.