Acknowledgements

We would like to acknowledge the Sociology Department at the University of Bergen for giving us the opportunity to conceive this book in a wonderful atmosphere of collegiality and respect for learning that we shared there with Ole Johnny Olsen (and his wife Helen), Mette Andersen, Olav Korsnes, Johannes Hjellbrekke, Alf Nilsen, Ann Nilsen, Kari Waerness and the creator of the course that we taught together – our friend Sigmund Gronmo and his wife Vigdis Bjorness.

Georgina Murray would like to acknowledge David Peetz, her husband, who worked on the teaching team in Bergen and who has given endless support through the writing of the chapters. She would also like to thank Griffith University for the times that she was not too burdened down with teaching to write large chunks of this. In AUT in Auckland, particular thanks go to friends Felicity Lamm, Erling Rasmauseen and Judith Pringle, who have kindly supported Georgina and David on study leave to finish the book. As have Gregor Murray, Nicolas Roby and Maire-Elen Dube at CRIMT, University of Montreal.

John Scott would like to acknowledge support given by colleagues at Plymouth University during the time spent working on this book and to colleagues at Essex University who supported the wider research on which it draws. Essex and Plymouth universities provided opportunities for John and Georgina to meet and develop the ideas explored in this book.

We would also like to acknowledge the help of Emma Left Weatherley, Chau Nuygen-Murray, Mai Murray, Jessica Randle, Anna Haebich, Joan Casser, Ainslie Meiklejohn, Linus Power, Candis Craven, Nick Bander Peetz, Jenny Chester, Mathieu Dupuis, and Lorenzo Frangi.

We would also like to thank those at Edward Elgar who produced this work so expertly and in such a short time frame, particularly Elizabeth Clack and Jo Betteridge.
