Contributors

Alberto Alemanno is Jean Monnet Professor of EU Law & Risk Regulation at Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales (HEC) Paris, where he teaches EU law, international economic law, global antitrust and risk regulation. He has been a qualified attorney at law in New York since 2004 and Adjunct Professor at Georgetown Law School, St Gallen University and Fribourg Law School. Originally from Italy, Alemanno earned a Laurea in Giurisprudenza cum laude from the Università degli Studi di Torino, LLM degrees from Harvard Law School and the College of Europe (Bruges), and a PhD in International Law and Economics from Bocconi University. He is the Editor of the European Journal of Risk Regulation.

Nick Bernard graduated in law from the Université Paris-XI and the University of Kent at Canterbury. After his Masters in International Trade Law from Paris-I Panthéon-Sorbonne, he took up posts at the University of Essex and at Queen’s University Belfast. He joined Queen Mary in 2003 as Senior Lecturer.

Vincent Brannigan holds his juris doctor degree from Georgetown University and is a member of the Maryland and DC Bars. He has been a full-time faculty member at the University of Maryland since 1977. Prior to joining the faculty, he worked at the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration and the Center for Fire Research at the National Bureau of Standards. He authored the legal materials for the Open Learning Fire Service Programme and has been an adjunct faculty member at the US Fire Academy since it was founded.

Chad Michael Briggs holds a PhD in political science from Carleton University in Canada and is principal of GlobalINT LLC and also Minerva Chair of Energy and Environmental Security for the Spaatz Center, Air University, United States Air Force. He is a former senior advisor to the US Department of Energy, and was team leader for the Abrupt Climate Change and Security project under GlobalESEE. He is based in Berlin, Germany, where he is a senior associate with Adelphi.
Consult. He has also taught at universities in Ireland, Canada, and the UK, covering subjects from European history and sociology to environmental security and hydrogeology.

Morten Broberg, PhD in law and HD in international economics was associate professor in international development law before being appointed professor at the University of Copenhagen. He is also consulting senior researcher at the Danish Institute for International Studies and has been a visiting researcher at Oxford University, London School of Economics and Université Robert Schuman in Strasbourg, amongst others.

Adam Burgess is currently senior lecturer in sociology, having previously held lecturing posts at the universities of Reading, Bath and Brunel, and a research fellowship at the Centre for the Study of Democracy at Westminster University. In the department he is the director of studies and also currently coordinates the teaching of introductory sociology. He is on the editorial board of the principal journal in his field, Health, Risk and Society and an editor of the new online journal, Sociology Compass.

Giuliano G. Castellano is Research Fellow at Bocconi University (Department of Law) in Milan (Italy) and Research Associate at the École Polytechnique of Paris (PREG/CRG). He graduated in law at Bocconi University (Milan) and he holds a PhD from the Collegio Carlo Alberto (University of Turin) in comparative analysis of law, economics and institutions and a PhD in economics and social sciences at the École Polytechnique of Paris (PREG/CRG), with highest honors. He was ‘Vinci Fellow’ (Université Franco-Italienne) and he was awarded from the École Polytechnique a post-doctoral fellowship to conduct his research on financial markets regulation at the Center for Socio-Legal Studies (University of Oxford). He has been teaching law and economics, comparative law, financial markets regulation, and financial instruments at Bocconi University and at the International University College of Turin. He collaborates with different international organizations and he publishes and researches in the fields of: comparative law, law and economics, law and finance, and risk regulation and governance. He practises law in Milan.

Sweta Chakraborty is originally from New York City and is currently a post-doctoral fellow at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies at Oxford University where she is working on drug safety and pharmacovigilance issues. She recently submitted her PhD thesis in ‘The Role of Trust in Chronic Prescription Drug Taking’ at the King’s Centre for Risk Management, King’s College London. She is correspondent in risk communication for the European Journal of Risk Regulation.

Alfredo Fioritto is Associate Professor at the University of Pisa where he teaches administrative law, administrative justice and planning law at the law faculty. Doctor of law, University of Rome, 1980, with thesis on administrative law, he was Visiting Scholar at the Faculty of Law of Paris, La Sorbonne, with a NATO-Advanced fellowship programme (1987–88) grant and a CNRS grant. During the years his research interests ranged over many themes of administrative law (policy implementation in agriculture, central–local governments relationship, trends in the administration by contracts in France and Italy, the negotiation in public contracts, simplification in administrative procedure and legal language, emergency administration).

Francesca Hansstein is a PhD candidate in agri-food economics and statistics at the University of Bologna. She holds a BSc in communication sciences from the University of Milan and an MSc in development studies from the University of Bologna. She has been at the New York University as a visiting student during the last year of her PhD. Her research interests focus on food policy, obesity and behavioural economics.

Lorenza Jachia is Head, Regulatory Cooperation Unit, and Secretary, Working Party on Regulatory Cooperation and Standardization Policies (WP6) United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, Switzerland. She holds a master’s degree from the Graduate Institute for International Studies (Geneva) and a bachelor’s degree from Bocconi University (Milan).

Alain Jeunemaître, an economist by training, has attachments to the Ecole Polytechnique as Director of Research (Paris) and to the University of Oxford. From 1988 to 2003, he has held visiting positions at the London School of Economics, Hertford College, Nuffield College and the Maison Française d’Oxford. He has been attached to the CSL since 2004 with PhD visiting studentships at the Centre and lecturing to the BCL/ MJur option on regulation.

Chris Johnson is Professor of Computing Science at the University of Glasgow. His research focuses on the analysis of failures involving complex socio-technical systems. He helped to author the guidelines on accident investigation across European Air Traffic Management and was a member of the Eurocontrol contingency planning team, helping to author European guidelines on the management of high-consequence, low-probability mishaps. He is co-chair of the SESAR Scientific Advisory Board for the European Commission. He is presently helping to author training guidelines for European railway accident investigators and is working with organizations including the US Air Force, NASA and the European Space Agency.

Christopher Lawless is currently a teaching fellow within the Institute for the Study of Science, Technology and Innovation (ISSTI) at the University of Edinburgh. His research field includes: use of evidence and probability theory in decision-making, the law–science relationship, risk and regulation issues associated with science and technology, commercialization of science.

Francisco B. López-Jurado is the Director of the Department of Administrative Law at the University of Navara’s Law School. He holds a JD and PhD from the University of Granada Law School. His research fields cover administrative law and risk regulation.

Donald Macrae is a member of the UK’s Risk and Regulation Advisory Council. Before going independent in 2007 as a consultant in regulation and policy, he was Director General for Law and Regulation in the UK’s Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. Amongst his recent consultancy work, he has for over a year been advising Brazil’s technical standards regulator, Inmetro, on applying impact assessment to conformity assessment procedures, in conjunction with the University of Sao Paulo.

Mario Mazzocchi is an associate professor in applied economics and statistics at the Department of Statistics, University of Bologna. He is also Visiting Research Fellow at the University of Reading, where he has previously served as a lecturer in applied economics and consumer behaviour. He has been a consultant to the European Commission and FAO. His publication record includes two books with Oxford University Press (Fat Economics) and Sage Publications (Statistics for Marketing and Consumer Research) and about 30 articles in international refereed journals on a variety of applied economics topics, including policy evaluation, consumer demand, health economics, marketing research methods, time series econometrics.

Valentin Nikonov is the ad interim coordinator of the UNECE Group of Experts on Risk Management in Regulatory Systems. He works as a consultant in a UNECE project to identify regulatory barriers to trade. At the Growth Trajectory Consulting Company since 2003, he has completed several projects to help service companies raise business efficiency through the application of international standards. Valentin has a PhD in economics, is a certified ISO/IEC 9001:2008 auditor and certified project manager. He authored a book on risk management and numerous articles on risk, information security and project portfolio management.

Maddalena Ragona is a research fellow at the Department of Statistics of the University of Bologna. She is currently involved in the EC-funded MoniQA Network of Excellence (Monitoring and Quality Assurance in the Food Supply Chain), where her work focuses on methodologies for the impact assessment of food safety regulations. She holds a PhD in food and environmental economics (University of Naples, Parthenope, Italy), an MSc in agricultural development economics (University of Reading), and a ‘Laurea’ degree in tropical and sub-tropical agricultural sciences (University of Florence). Her research interests include, among others, economics of social regulation, economics of risk communication, policy evaluation methods, cost-benefit analysis and multi-criteria analysis.

Marta Simoncini is a PhD in public utilities and regulation (majoring administrative law) at the University of Pisa. She is interested in comparative and european administrative law and she focused her research on the administrative law approach to the protection of fundamental rights. In 2007 she was also a visiting scholar at King’s College London, where she spent a research term working on UK regulation on terrorism. In 2006 she attended an internship at the Italian Data Protection Supervisor, where she practised her legal expertise in the protection of personal data and privacy. She has recently published part of her findings in many peer review journals of both national and international relevance (Rivista trimestrale di diritto pubblico, German Law Journal, European Journal of Law Reform, Civitas Europa, Panóptica, European Journal of Risk Regulation (forthcoming)) and she has just finished a monograph on the foundations of standard-based regulation of catastrophic risks in counter-terrorism issues and environmental matters.

A.M. Viens is a postgraduate research student at Queen Mary University London, where he is preparing a thesis on ‘Morality in Times of Emergency’. Most of AM Viens’ work focuses on philosophical ethics and the philosophy of law. His research focuses on metaethics (practical reason and the nature of ethics) and applied ethics (especially public health ethics, research ethics, health policy ethics, and the ethics of bioscience and biotechnology).