Preface

This book is the result of extensive fieldwork that could not have been completed without the most generous support of a great number of individuals, all of whom have devoted considerable time to share their insights and knowledge with the author. Many of them have also spent time checking the accuracy of (parts of) the voluminous and complex empirical materials that form the heart of the book. For all these dedicated, unreserved and thorough contributions, I express my deepest gratitude.

This study has been carried out as part of an on-going research programme called Corporate Governance in Financial Capitalism that has been conducted at the Centre for Studies in Corporate Governance and Management at the Stockholm School of Economics' Institute for Economic Research (SIR) since 1977.

Most of the material in this book has been discussed at seminars together with researchers active in the field, and I am most grateful for their feedback and suggestions for improvement. Particular thanks go to Associate Professor Markus Kallifatides and Assistant Professor Sophie Nachemson-Ekwall for their constructive comments.

I would also like to thank 'Handelsbanken's Research Foundations and Matts Carlgren's Foundation for Management Research for generously providing funding for this extensive research project. Many thanks also to Ingrid Kollberg for her assistance in the production of the manuscript, and Regina List for her professional language editing and general advice.

The responsibility for all the contents of this book, of course, remains with the author.
