

Contributors

Bernd Beckert is the deputy head of the Competence Center “Emerging Technologies” at the Fraunhofer Institute for Systems and Innovation Research ISI in Karlsruhe, Germany. His research focuses on the interplay between technical infrastructures and new Internet applications in a converging digital media world.

Isabel Bortagaray is an independent consultant working in Montevideo, Uruguay. Her research interests are research program evaluation and inclusive innovation, with a focus on agriculture.

Lídia Brito is Director of Science Policies and Capacity Building in the Natural Sciences Division of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), Paris, France. She was formerly minister of science in Mozambique.

Roland Brouwer is an independent consultant working in Maputo, Mozambique. His research interests are in science, technology, and environmental policy.

Susan Cozzens is a Professor in the School of Public Policy at the Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, USA and Director of its Technology Policy and Assessment Center. Her research interests are innovation for inclusive development and science, technology and innovation policies in low- and middle-income countries.

Mário Paulo Falcão is a Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Agronomy and Forestry Engineering, Department of Forest Engineering at Eduardo Mondlane University, Maputo, Mozambique. His research is on natural resource management, with a main focus on the forestry sector.

Sonia D. Gatchair is a Lecturer at the University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica, where she teaches Public Policy and Management. Her research interests are on the influence of science, technology and innovation policies on development.

J. Adam Holbrook is an adjunct professor and Associate Director of the Centre for Policy Research on Science and Technology (CPROST), at Simon Fraser University, Vancouver, BC, Canada. His research and teaching activities centre on the analysis and impact of science, technology and innovation in the public sector and private sector, both in Canada and abroad.

Lisa A. Pace is a postgraduate researcher in the Manchester Institute of Innovation Research at the Manchester Business School, University of Manchester, UK, studying the capabilities of traditional service sectors to adopt sustainable energy consumption practices.

Dhanaraj Thakur is a Lecturer in Political Science at the University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica. His research examines the relationships between information and communication technologies, gender, and democracy in developing countries.