This book originates from the first phase of a seven-year research programme (2010–2017) on Global Governance and Democratic Government, funded by the Special Research Fund (BOF) at the University of Leuven (KU Leuven). This programme, hosted by the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies (GGS) and conducted jointly by GGS and the Centre for Ethics, Social and Political Philosophy of KU Leuven aims to contribute to the ongoing debate about the nature of global governance and its democratic legitimacy implications.

A book is always a collective undertaking, but in this case it is more than that: it is the product of an ongoing process of common discussion and reflection of a whole group of researchers. We received feedback and support from a whole series of people. First, we owe gratitude to Dr Simon Schunz and Nicolas Hachez. Both provided invaluable input at various stages of the project, which challenged and strengthened the structure and the arguments of all the chapters. We would also like to thank all colleagues of KU Leuven and the many guests who attended the seminars held at GGS, where we were able to present draft chapters of this book. We are also grateful to have benefited from the helpful insights of Prof. Dr Thomas Weiss, who was a visiting professor at GGS in the framework of our research programme.

We are also very appreciative of the comments we received at various workshops from Prof. Dr Jan Aart Scholte and Prof. Dr Andreas Follesdal, who are members of our international Scientific Advisory Board. We would also like to thank the other members of this Board for their much appreciated support: Prof. Dr Walter van Gerven, Prof. Dr René Foqué, Prof. Dr Arthur Mol, Prof. Dr Bert van den Brink and Prof. Dr Andreas Kalyvas.

Finally, we are grateful to Edward Elgar Publishing for endorsing the publication of this book project, and thank all the authors for their contributions to this collaborative endeavour.
