There are so many people I would like to thank, and without whom this book could not have been written. First, I’d like to mention those special school entrepreneurs in India, their pupils and teachers; most of all my dearest friends Fazalur Khurrum, Reshma Lohia, Mr Wajid, Mr Parvees, Mr Sajid and Khan Lateef Kahn. You and your children will remain in my heart always. You are the reason for my work.

The research upon which much of this book is based would not have taken place without funding from the Sir John Templeton Foundation. The opportunity the foundation gave was where this really all began for me. So thanks particularly to Charles Harper and Arthur Schwarz. Another big step was through my work with Absolute Return for Kids (ARK). A special mention goes to Paul Marshall, who had faith and still does – something about blowing the bloody doors off I remember. Also to Dame Sally Morgan who was there in Delhi and Lord Nat Wei who wasn’t but had belief, along with Amitav Virmani, Leena Patel and Rasika Sirdar who worked determinedly with me in Delhi to make things work. And boy they did. Also in India, to my friends Gurcharan Das, Parth Shah, Barun Mitra, S.V. Gomathi, Aishwarya Ravindran, Baladevan Rangaraju, and Deepak and Barbara Lal who were all never far away.

Those who have inspired me include Pete Boettke, Israel Kirzner, Colin Riordan, Erik Gregory, Patrick Wolf, Brian Snowdon, Richard Graham, Mark Pennington, Philip Walling and Steven Pfeiffer. Thank you.

Finally to my dearest friends here at home, a special mention to Tom and Louise Kirkwood without whom I would never have made it, along with Jonathan and Katherine Clark and you all know why. Thanks also go to John and Anne-Marie Trevelyan for providing a home, to Steve Hardman and his family for improving it and to Chris and Janet Dickson for giving me freedom when I needed it. Also to Scott Miller, Lisa and Syd (with a y) Ahomet for keeping my body in shape when my mind was going and my treasured friends Louise Collyer and Jane Eggleston from Newcastle just for being there. Bless you. I also appreciate the support of my students and colleagues at Newcastle University, especially Charles Harvey, Simon Kometa, Rene Koglbauer, James Stanfield, James Tooley, Chris Counihan, Michael Burgess, Geoff Calder, Carl Towler and Gerry Docherty. deepest of thanks to both Chloe Mitchell and Alison Hornbeck of Edward Elgar Publishing for all of their help and correspondence in preparing this manuscript.

But most of all to my twin sister, Jackie, and Mum, Alison, who always had faith and knew I could do it and were always by my side, even when things got tough. I would be nothing without you. This book is dedicated to you both with much love.
