

Acknowledgements

The editors are most grateful to the Dutch Ministries of Security and Justice and Foreign Affairs, as well as to the Wiarda Institute of Utrecht School of Law for their generous financial support to this project. We very much appreciate the fact that they saw the need to put the criticism of the Court on the agenda and to discuss it, in order to address and remedy it.

The editors are also much indebted to the authors of the individual chapters and are grateful for the spirit of cooperation with which each of them approached the project. Book projects like these, which tackle current topics, require tight deadlines and authors willing to meet them. We very much appreciate that all contributors not only delivered on time but also in good spirits.

The editors also greatly appreciate the assistance of the Netherlands School of Human Rights Research. Esther Heldenbergh in particular has done an excellent job while taking care of the logistics of the project. Through her professionalism she has been a tower of support.

Finally, the editors gratefully acknowledge the publishers, Edward Elgar, in particular Ben Booth, for their invaluable support and guidance in steering this project to a successful conclusion.
