

Acknowledgments

---

There are many people and organizations without whose support this book could not have been written. The research was funded by the Australian Research Council (project number DP 120102224). The opinions expressed in the book – which is the result of an equal contribution by both authors – are of course our own, as are any errors. The book is generally up to date with developments until early November 2015, and could not deal with matters such as the agreement reached between the EU and Turkey to stem the flow of migrants into the EU.

We would like to thank the following people for research assistance during the project: Kate Worrall, Sherwood Du, Samantha Nean, Emi Christensen and Shirin Vloeberghs.

We are also grateful to the participants at the colloquium held at the Australian National University, from whom we learnt so much. Thank you to Atem Atem, Brian Barbour, Andrew Bartlett, Nabila Buhari, Rafendi Djamin, Tamara Domicelj, Elizabeth Ferris, Marianne van Galen Dickie, Ellen Hansen, Susan Harris-Rimmer, Carina Hoang, Khanh Hoang, Stephen Howes, Peter Hughes, Kim Huynh, Fiona Jenkins, James Jupp, Satvinder Juss, Rezaur Rahman Lenin, Arja Keski-Nummi, Victoria Mason, Malvino Aprialdy Mazni, John Menadue, Kerry Murphy, Hitoshi Nasu, Akiko Okudaira, Paul Power, Yasunobu Sato, Supriyanto Suwito, Savitri Taylor, James Thomson, Richard Towle, Sarah Wardell and Matthew Zagor.

We would also like to thank all those who participated in interviews with us during field work in Latin America and Southeast Asia, including those who could not go on record or who are not quoted in the book. Each of you added valuable insights to the project. Colleagues at UNHCR were particularly helpful in providing contacts for this field work.

Many colleagues, too numerous to mention, at Griffith Law School and the Australian National University have lifted flagging spirits and celebrated milestones with us. Pene would like to give a special thanks to Hilary Charlesworth, who has given her time and counsel so generously so many times over the last 27 years. Tristan and Pene would also like to specially thank Renata Grossi for her kind support and generous feedback. We would also like to thank Jim Hathaway, Erika Feller and Madeline Garlick for invaluable conversations at critical moments.

Library staff at the ANU and Griffith University have been very helpful with all our requests for research materials. In times when universities are experiencing extraordinary fiscal retraction, it is remarkable that library staff continue to meet the needs of their research and teaching colleagues so well. We are also indebted to Rachel Salmond for her superb proof-reading services. Pene would like to thank Sue Powe for her superlative skill in organizing the diary and creating space for research and writing.

Finally, we would like to thank our families for their constant support, love and encouragement. Tristan would like to thank his fiancé Ruty, his parents Jenny and Peter, his grandmother Ngaira, as well as Luke, Karen, Mitch, Gabriela and little Julian. Pene would like to thank Don Anton, Tom Anton, and their small dog, Chase, who is the most loyal of writing companions and never offers gratuitous criticism.

Penelope Mathew, Brisbane, November 2015

Tristan Harley, Sydney, November 2015

