

Acknowledgements

The Stockholm Programme of Place Branding (STOPP) at Stockholm Business School, Stockholm University, was the organizer of the first conference about Branding Chinese Mega-Cities, and has served as the institutional foundation for the research carried out by the two editors. We thus take this opportunity to thank all our colleagues, partners and friends at STOPP for your support, inspiration and consistent good humour.

Of critical importance to any research venture is always financing, and here we would like to extend our appreciation to three financing bodies. Firstly, to the Swedish Research Council, which financed the research programme 'Branding Metropolitan Place in Global Space', which served as the conceptual framework for our research programme. Secondly, we would like to thank Forum for Asian Studies at Stockholm University, for financially supporting our two conferences, and part of this book. Finally, our thanks go to the Söderberg Foundation, which, through generous support over the years, made it possible for us to build up the necessary resources for our research.

There are also four people to whom we are particularly grateful. Professor Guje Sevón at the Stockholm School of Economics was the first to come up with the idea of the book at the party in Stockholm, and she also contributed the first drafts of how to structure the content of the book. Without Anna Felicia Ehnhage, the administrative editor of the book, and her orderliness and ability to keep track of chapters in different stages of completion, this book would never have come into being. Linda Strid was administratively responsible for the first conference on Branding Chinese Mega-Cities in 2012, and the network of Chinese scholars she developed then is still of great use to us today. Finally, Katherine Stuart, who had the sometimes very difficult job of editing and proofreading the chapters of the book. To all of you – thank you!

However, in the end, together with our colleagues who have contributed to the book, we stand alone in our responsibility for what appears in the text.
