

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xiii
1. A critique of political technology	1
1.1 Political technology, good governance and statecraft	1
1.2 Political technology as mindset	5
1.3 Political technology as method	7
1.4 Political technology of the security state	25
2. Visions of political technology	30
2.1 Hobbes and the beginning of modern political technology	30
2.2 Construction: Images of the Leviathan	34
2.3 Subversion: The Panopticon and the capillaries of power	38
2.4 Deconstruction: From sovereign to democratic aesthetics	42
3. Constellations of law-rule and the state of exception	51
3.1 From visual magic to polysemy	51
3.2 Origins, affinities and differences	54
3.3 The Rechtsstaat – a German ‘ Sonderweg ’	61
3.4 The constitutionalization of the Rechtsstaat and the state of emergency	71
3.5 The post-Nazi constellation: Locke unplugged, natural law updated	78
3.6 Reinventing the state of exception as ‘protected democracy’	80
3.7 The form of law-rule versus the substance of the welfare state	83
3.8 Rechtsstaat : All form – no justice?	91
3.9 The preventive state – a global formula	93
4. The state of exception as mindset and doctrine	97
4.1 The ambivalence of the liberal paradigm	97

4.2	Apocalypse and the politics of fear: About Schmitt	100
4.3	From Schmitt towards Agamben: The bare state of exception	112
4.4	Search movements: The repressed state of exception	115
4.5	Flirting with the state of exception: Imagining worst-case scenarios	120
4.6	The decapitation of law-rule and Locke	136
4.7	State impotence and abuse as fixed points in the mindset of emergency technicians	139
5.	Political extremism and the militancy of law-rule	147
5.1	Protest, law-rule and fear	147
5.2	Hobbes, Locke and the freedom from fear	150
5.3	Preliminary considerations on the analysis of politico-legal fears	152
5.4	The freedom from fear and rationality under law-rule	160
5.5	Manipulations of the legislative techniques of governing	166
5.6	Metalegality and the law of fear	174
5.7	The law of fear and 'Meta-fundamental Rights'	179
5.8	Meta-fundamental rights, metalegality and myth	183
6.	Normalizing the state of exception: Counter-terrorism and 'whatever it takes'	185
6.1	Terror as manipulative communication	185
6.2	Terrorism and the 'new security architecture'	187
6.3	The 'normalization' of the state of emergency	189
6.4	The logic of militant law	192
6.5	The asymmetry between freedom and security	195
6.6	Militant law as special police law	198
6.7	'Enemy criminal law' and other phenomena of militant law	207
6.8	Some effects of combat law and security mentality	216
7.	Normalizing torture as a technique of governing: What 'the exigencies of war' demand?	221
7.1	The domestication of a taboo	221
7.2	A 'return' to the 'Middle Ages'?	226
7.3	The new paradigm?	230
7.4	Practical consequences of 'rescue torture'	238
7.5	The polysemy of torture and its abuses	245
	Bibliography	252
	Index	295