

Figures

2.1	Key determinants of well-being in everyday life	24
2.2	Hurried life in affluent society	30
2.3	Socio-economic transformation weakens the sense of coherence	32
2.4	Dimensions of individual coherence and consequences of incoherence	40
3.1	The health ease–dis-ease continuum	70
3.2	The salutogenic umbrella	73
3.3	Mental health as flourishing	76
3.4	Well-being in the context of health research	85
3.5	The river of life	86
3.6	The impact of the SOC in a lifetime perspective	89
4.1	Transformation	109
5.1	Happiness by age, on weekdays and weekends	128
6.1	Private consumption, wages and excess consumption	147
6.2	Personal saving rate as a percentage of disposable personal income	147
6.3	Private consumption-to-GDP ratio across countries	148
6.4	Total consumption-to-GDP ratio across countries	148
6.5	Ratio between US household debt (mortgage debt and total debt) and wages	149
6.6	Change in US household total debt, mortgage debt and current account balance	150
6.7	Home price indexes	151
6.8	Ratio between the value of US residential mortgages and residential home values (primary residence only)	152
6.9	Trend of self-reported happiness in the US	164
6.10	Trends in total working time across countries	166
6.11	Differences in the use of time between Germany and the US	167
6.12	Trends in European well-being	168
6.13	Outstanding mortgage-backed securities by issuer	173
7.1	Three interrelated domains of the Reasonable Person Model	187
9.1	The ASSET model of employee well-being	250

14.1	The dynamic model of well-being	324
14.2	The links between good functioning, represented by the components of self-determination theory, and the key features of co-production	334
14.3	The Five Ways to Well-being messaging	338