Contributors

María Inés Barbero is Professor at Universidad de Buenos Aires and Universidad de San Andrés, and director of the Centro de Estudios de Historia y Desarrollo de Empresas in Argentina. She graduated from Universidad de Buenos Aires and Universidad Complutense de Madrid. In 2009 she was Alfred Chandler Visiting Scholar at Harvard Business School. Her current research is on the history of family firms, business groups and Latin American multinationals.

Marcelo Bucheli is Associate Professor of Business Administration at University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, in the United States. He received his Ph.D from Stanford University, and was the Harvard-Newcomen Fellow in Business History at Harvard Business School between 2004 and 2005. His publications include Bananas and Business. The United Fruit Company in Colombia, 1899–2000 (New York, 2005), and he is currently researching the political economy of foreign direct investment in Latin America.

Gonzalo Islas is Professor at the Business School of the Universidad Adolfo Ibáñez in Chile. He has worked as a consultant for Chilean government institutions and the International Labor Office. He received his MA and Ph.D from University of California at Los Angeles. His research is focused on the history of corporate governance and business groups.

Norma Silvana Lanciotti is Researcher at the National Council of Scientific and Technical Research of Argentina (CONICET) and Professor at Universidad Nacional de Rosario in Argentina. She received her Ph.D from the Universidad Nacional de Rosario. She is the author of De rentistas...

Andrea Lluch is Researcher at the National Council of Scientific and Technical Research of Argentina (CONICET), Professor at National University of La Pampa in Argentina and Affiliated Researcher at the David Rockefeller Center for Latin American Studies at Harvard University. Between 2006 and 2009 she was the Harvard-Newcomen Fellow in Business History and a Research Fellow at the Harvard Business School. She received her Ph.D from the Universidad Nacional del Centro de Buenos Aires. She researches the history of direct foreign investment, family business and corporate networks in Latin America during the twentieth century.

Andrés López is Professor of Development Economics, University of Buenos Aires, in Argentina, and Director and Researcher at the Centro de Investigaciones para la Transformacion. He received his Ph.D from Buenos Aires University. He has been a consultant for many international organizations including ECLA and UNCTAD.

Rory M. Miller is Reader in International Business at University of Liverpool Management School, in England. He received his Ph.D from the University of Cambridge. He is currently the Joint Editor of the Journal of Latin American Studies. His research focuses on the historical impact of multinational enterprises in Latin America, specializing on British-owned companies after World War II.

Oscar Muñoz is Professor and Associated Researcher at Facultad Latinoamericana de Ciencias Sociales in Chile. He received his Ph.D from Yale University. He is a former president of Corporación de Estudios para Latinoamérica. He has served as coordinator of Public Policies Programs at the United Nations Development Programme and as an invited professor at Universidad de Chile. He has published extensively on the relationship between business, the state and economic development.

Javier Vidal Olivares is Professor of Economic and Business History at Alicante University in Spain. He received his Ph.D from Valencia University. He is author of Alas de España. Iberia, Líneas Aéreas de España, 1940–2005. De aerolínea de bandera a transportista mundial (Valencia, 2008).