Acknowledgements

The thoughts for this book began during the research for my PhD thesis. It has evolved significantly over time, however much of it was conceptualised during my time as a PhD student. As such I am completely indebted to many people for their time and advice and I would like to acknowledge them here. First, my PhD supervisor, Professor Douglas Fisher, provided both intellectual and emotional support throughout the PhD process and I will always be grateful to have had him as my teacher and mentor.

Many other people have generously given their time to read through my work and provided very valuable feedback. My thanks are extended to Professor William Duncan, and Professor Sharon Christensen from the Commercial and Property Law Research Centre at QUT, Dr Rowena Maguire, Dr Nicolas Suzor, Dr Carmel O'Sullivan, Dr Nigel Stobbs, Dr Sholam Blustein, Hope Johnson, Robert Chesher, Professor Daniel Hunter, Dr Md. Saiful Karim and to all those who attended my research seminars and provided much needed advice. I also appreciate the work of the team at Edward Elgar, in particular Carolyn Fox who was copy editor for this publication. I appreciate your support in finalising this work.

The law in this book is up to date to August 2014. It has been quite a challenge to stay abreast of emissions trading law during the past three years. This is a result of the amendments and political issues that surrounded the Australian Clean Energy Package legislation and the Carbon Pollution Reduction Scheme Package that preceded it. The uncertainty that accompanied the Package legislation was ended in part when it was repealed in July 2014. I have continued to refer to it throughout this publication as it represents an excellent comparison with the European Union Emissions Trading System.

My final thoughts for this acknowledgement are in appreciation of the people who have provided my life with the balance I have needed in the last several years. My children Sam and Erin have inspired me throughout this process. They know that work means they don't see me at every event in their lives despite my best efforts. Thank you to you both for your gracious acceptance of this. In this respect, without the support from my family, particularly my mother and step-father, this book would have been somewhat incomplete at this stage. Thank you for believing in me. I would also like to thank my father and brother for being my voices of reason. Thank you for persisting with a somewhat difficult task, made harder as reason cannot always overcome emotion, particularly with me. To my sister, thank you for understanding me. To Paul, I appreciate that without the years of support this book would not have been a possibility. To Chris, thank you for helping me to channel my motivation and energy, and for the balance you have assisted me in introducing into my life.

I would also like to thank my wonderful friends for being supportive throughout the last several years. A number of people have repeatedly provided me with strength and support in different ways when I needed it. I am indebted to several people for the wisdom they have imparted. These are the people who have helped me to see where my strengths are, to accept where they are not, and to live life in a happier and healthier way. For this I would like to say thank you for your support, advice and friendship. I appreciate that I am a very fortunate person.

Dr Felicity Deane
Queensland University of Technology
International Law and Global Governance Research Program
Commercial and Property Law Research Centre