Acknowledgments

Creating this book would not have been possible if not for all of those who worked to flesh out the ideas inside and support the process of bringing these chapters together. While the contents of this book began as conference papers and presentations, we are pleased to present them to you now with the hope that they serve as a jumping off point for future conversations and research on the gravitational trends emerging between public administration, international relations and global governance. We sincerely appreciate all of the support we received for this project both before and after hosting the conference for which this book is named.

The Public Administration in the Context of Global Governance Conference, held June 2013 in New York City, and this subsequent work came together through the generosity and sponsorship of the Howard G. & S. Louise Phanstiel Chair in Strategic Management and Leadership, the Maxwell Summer Project Assistantship Award, the Office of Research at Syracuse University and the Campbell Public Affairs Institute, and in particular, Director Grant Reeher, Kelley Smith Coleman and Bethany Walawender.

Our academic home, the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, was a fantastic resource for support and guidance. We would especially like to acknowledge Dean James Steinberg and Ross Rubenstein – Chair of the Public Administration and International Affairs department. Further, the conference was made successful with the help of our colleagues and conference advisory committee members Catherine Bertini, Walter Broadnax and Rosemary O’Leary. An additional thanks is owed to Catherine Bertini for agreeing to be interviewed for this project and offering her experience and insights from her time as the Executive Director of the United Nations World Food Program.

While not all of those who participated in the conference are featured in chapters, the thoughtful conversations we all shared at the conference inspired and validated our desire to create this book.
