About the authors

Michael L. Buenger, Esq., is the former state court administrator for South Dakota (1995–2000) and Missouri (2000–2007). From 2007–2010 Buenger worked for the National Center for State Courts as a senior rule of law advisor in Kosovo assisting the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Kosovo government on a variety of judicial, legislative, prosecutorial reform projects. He has also consulted on rule of law projects in Macedonia and Egypt. Buenger holds a Bachelor of Arts, cum laude, from the University of Dayton, a Juris Doctorate, cum laude, from St. Louis University School of Law, and an LLM in Public International Law, with Distinction, from the University of Kent, Canterbury, Brussels School of International Studies (BSIS), where he was awarded the Ambassador John McGregor Prize. His research interests include state courts, state constitutions, and the use of domestic legal systems to set international norms of conduct applicable to other nations and individuals. Buenger was involved in the writing of four interstate compacts governing interstate criminal and juvenile justice and child welfare and education matters. He has consulted with the Council of State Governments, the Interstate Commission on Adult Offender Supervision, the Interstate Commission on Juveniles, and the American Public Human Services Association. He has taught at the Brussels School of International Studies, the Kosovo Judicial Institute, the Ohio Judicial College, the University of Dayton, and Sinclair Community College. He also served as the President of the National Conference of State Court Administrators (COSCA), vice-chair of the Board of Directors of the National Center for State Courts (NCSC), and as a trustee of the National Judicial College. In 2004, Buenger received the Missouri State Bar President's Award in recognition of his work to promote an independent and accountable state court system. In 2005, Buenger was inducted into the Warren E. Burger Society of the NCSC in recognition of his contributions to the state courts. Buenger has published in areas related to courts, interstate cooperation, legislative relations, international regulatory law and practice, and international human rights. He currently serves as the Administrative Director of the Supreme Court of Ohio.

Paul J. De Muniz is a former Oregon appellate judge having served for more than 22 years on the bench including as chief justice of the Oregon

Supreme Court and the administrative head of the Oregon Judicial Branch from January 2006 to May 2012, retiring from the Supreme Court at the end of 2012. De Muniz graduated from Portland State University in 1972 and Willamette University College of Law in 1975. He is a Vietnam war veteran. During his judicial career De Muniz wrote and spoke to both national and international audiences on the importance of maintaining independent state judiciaries, improving state court administration and the need for adequate state court funding. He has served as the 2009 Robert H. Jackson Lecturer for the National Judicial College and, in 2010, addressed judicial leaders from fifty-five countries at the Asian Pacific Courts Conference on the ways and means of judicial branch strategic planning. Later that year, De Muniz gave the 17th annual Justice William Brennan Lecture on State Courts and Social Justice at New York University Law School, discussing the need for reengineering state court operations. In 2013 De Muniz addressed the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, D.C. on the subject of evaluating eyewitness identification evidence in court. De Muniz currently teaches at Willamette University College of Law as a Distinguished Jurist in Residence.
