Acknowledgements

The genesis for this book lies in my unpublished PhD dissertation entitled ‘Sunset Clauses and Experimental Legislation: Blessing or Curse for Innovation?’, the themes from which are extrapolated and further developed in this book. I would like to start by thanking Professors Rob van Gestel and Patricia Popelier for their time, friendship, and insights. Thank you for treating me like the senior researcher you always saw in me. I am on my way thanks to your advice.

I would also like to thank a number of scholars with whom I had the opportunity to discuss some aspects of my work. I am particularly grateful to Professors Martin Eifert, Christoph Engel, William Eskridge, W. Hoffmann-Riem, Ernst Hirsch Ballin, Bernd Holznagel, Günter Kriens, Pierre Larouche, Anne Meuwese, Edward Rubin, Charles Sabel, Gert-Jan Veerman, Wim Voermans, Felix Uhlmann and Pauline Westerman.

I would like to express my particular gratitude toward my colleagues at the University of Antwerp for their friendship and support. My sincere appreciation is also extended to the Portuguese Catholic University (Porto) where I ‘learned to crawl’, to Vieira de Almeida e associados, law firm (Lisbon) where I ‘learned to walk’, and Tilburg University where I ‘learned to run’.

Last but not least, I owe my deepest gratitude to my mother and my sister. Words cannot describe how grateful I am to my Mom for having given me wings to fly, for believing in me and particularly, for the unconditional love that has nourished and will continue to nourish and inspire my work.

viii