Figures, tables and boxes

FIGURES

2.1 Schematic presentation of the components of interactive governance and governability
4.1 The circle of interactive governance
8.1 The LGCDP structure
9.1 Determinants of public officials’ trust and their perceptions of citizens’ trustworthiness
10.1 A suggested progression of interactive governance types as a dynamic process
11.1 Typology of motives for participation
12.1 The Governance International Co-production Star
18.1 Steps in the joint fact-finding process

TABLES

1.1 Overview of the three perspectives on interactive governance
1.2 Instrumental perspective on interactive governance from a positive and critical stance
1.3 Cultural perspective on interactive governance from a positive and critical stance
1.4 Democratic perspective on interactive governance from a positive and critical stance
2.1 Assessing governability
6.1 Four outcomes for the role to be played by elected politicians – dependent on the relationship between representative democracy and types of interactive governance
6.2 Main characteristics of four outcomes of interactive governance processes
6.3 Possible measures for reducing the tension between representative democracy and interactive governance
9.1 Determinants of public officials’ trust and their perceptions of citizens’ trustworthiness: an inventory
Critical reflections on interactive governance

11.1 A comparison of community initiatives and other forms of civic participation 234
11.2 The ACTIE framework as basis for explanation of citizens’ participation in CIs 237
11.3 The ACTIE framework as basis for mobilization and facilitation 245
12.1 The Four Co’s and principles of public governance 264
13.1 Social constructions, type of target populations 284
14.1 Case study social enterprises 303
15.1 Critical cases of private and nonprofit Community Benefits Agreements (CBAs) 325
18.1 JFF from an instrumental perspective on interactive governance 384
18.2 JFF from a cultural perspective on interactive governance 385
18.3 JFF from a democratic perspective 386
18.4 Examples of JFF in practice 388
19.1 Outcomes of joint fact-finding 419
19.2 Barriers for successful joint fact-finding 420
20.1 Types of accountability for civil servants and network managers 436
22.1 Boundary-spanning profile of Yvonne, president of the civic initiative 477
22.2 Boundary-spanning profile of Fred, strategic advisor of the civic initiative 480
22.3 Boundary-spanning profile of Jan Hecker, program manager of citizen participation municipality of Vlaardingen 483
23.1 Comparing cooperatives with other organizational forms 511

BOX

19.1 Situations in which knowledge co-production is not suitable 404