In this short book we have been concerned to offer a straightforward characterization of the way in which politics works in China. We hope this book conveys some of our enthusiasm for understanding Chinese politics through a different and independent perspective and that it might inspire others to continue to do work in this area of research. We also hope that friends in China and elsewhere will find that what we have written is fair and realistic.

Many thanks are due to friends and colleagues in China, Hong Kong and England.
