Acknowledgments

This book is the product of an ADB technical assistance project, ‘Development through Empowerment: Delivering Effective Public Services’. It has been developed with the collective efforts of ADB staff and external experts and is the third and final output under the project. Its two sister publications were a Policy Report (‘Empowerment and Public Service Delivery in Developing Asia and the Pacific’), which focused on citizen empowerment, and an Asian Development Outlook 2013 Update theme chapter (‘Governance and Public Service Delivery’), which analyzed the role of good governance, both in the context of improving public service delivery.

Former Chief Economist Changyong Rhee gave strategic direction and was instrumental in the design of the project from its inception. Director Joseph E. Zveglich, Jr. of the Economic Research and Regional Cooperation Department of ADB provided helpful guidance and unflagging support throughout the project.

Nobel Laureate Amartya Sen’s invaluable advice and deep insights on issues discussed in the earlier policy report immensely benefited all three of the studies. This project would not have been possible without the excellent work of the contributing authors who provided valuable research and helped ensure this work will be available to the widest audience possible.

We are very grateful for the valuable comments and suggestions from the discussants and participants in the workshops sponsored by the ADB at the University of California, Riverside on 11–13 June 2013 and ADB headquarters in Manila on 9 November 2013.

Several others deserve special mention for their valuable help. Alastair McIndoe edited the papers according to ADB and Edward Elgar style. John Mercurio and Emmanuel Alano provided research assistance while Elenita Pura and Maria Susan Torres provided administrative and logistical support.

We are especially grateful to Matthew Howells, April-Marie Gallega and Maricris Jan Tobias of ADB’s Department of External Relations and to Emily Mew, Caroline Cornish and the staff of Edward Elgar for their interest in the project, and their cooperation and guidance throughout the publication process.