My thanks go first to Professor Stephen Cummings and Dr Sarah Proctor-Thomson at Victoria University of Wellington who provided invaluable support during the conduct of this research. While finalising this manuscript, colleagues at Massey University kindly ignored my distracted state of mind and offered encouragement to sustain the effort: my thanks go to Damian Ruth, Craig Prichard, Jo Bensemann, Andrew Dickson, Fahreen Alamgir, Ozan Alakavuklar and Shirley Barnett in particular. Professor Joanne Ciulla of the Jepson School provided me with delicate but insightful editorial guidance, while the team at Edward Elgar Publishing, including Alan Sturmer, Erin McVicar and Elizabeth Clack, have been a pleasure to work with. My family and friends have evinced absolute belief in my ability to succeed, even when I have doubted otherwise. For this my sincere thanks go to Mum and Dad, Jennifer, Des, Richard, Linda, Kathryn, David, Tony, Fiona, Chris, Sammi, Daniel, Logan, Holly, Georgia, Sandra, Nigel, David, Ashleigh, Pete, Rosemary, Leaann, Lucy, Jessie, Oscar, Bella, Pixie and Muffin. Finally, the person who both literally and figuratively sustains me on a day-to-day basis and who knows best of all what this endeavour has required is my darling partner, Steve Harris: thank you, thank you, thank you, for none of this would have come into existence without your support.
