

Contents

Preface	ix
Introduction: From colonial past to global reality	1
PART 1 THE 'MARCH OF ACCEPTANCE': ECONOMIC POWER IN THE HISTORY OF IDEAS
1. The philosophical view	13
1. The unitary philosophers: Kant and Hegel	13
2. Modern philosophy: Split between ethics and analysis of reality	15
3. Critical perspectives	16
2. The economic view	19
1. The march of pragmatism	19
2. The Schumpeterian synthesis	23
3. Critical perspectives	25
3. The legal view	29
1. From legal rationalism to positivism	29
2. Positivism and economic power	30
3. Critical perspectives	32
PART 2 MONOPOLIES AND THE HISTORY OF CAPITALISM
4. Colonial monopoly and underdevelopment	37
1. Economic power (and, hence, monopoly) as a structural determinant of the economies of underdeveloped countries	40
2. Monopolies and commercial interests of metropolises	49
3. Structuring of monopolies and the domestic markets of the colonies	64
4. Social structure resulting in colonies	79

5.	Industrialization and continuity of monopolistic structures	90
1.	Industrialization and continuity of the colonial economic model in Latin America	91
2.	Recolonization and decolonization of Asia	107
3.	Social structures: Comparison	121
6.	Internationalization of economic relations and the internationalization of monopolies	123
1.	Internationalization of economic relations and its effects	123
2.	The triple drain in its contemporary version – a global phenomenon	125
3.	The operation of the financial system and the new drains on the global markets	143
4.	Social structures: Poverty and the environment – a global problem	149
PART 3 CONCLUSION: THE END OR BEGINNING OF HISTORY?
	Bibliography	164
	Index	173