

About the Author

James Crotty is Emeritus Professor of Economics at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. His research in theory and policy attempts to integrate the complementary analytical strengths of the Marxian and Keynesian traditions. He has written on a diverse set of topics including: economic methodology; the implication of radical or Keynesian uncertainty for macro and micro theory; comparative theories of financial markets and financial instability; the role played by perverse incentives in financial firms in the creation of financial instability; the “financialization” of the non-financial firm; the causes and consequences of the ongoing global financial crisis; Marxian and Keynesian perspectives on investment theory; the structure and performance of the global neoliberal regime; theories of competition and their impact of theories of macro-dynamics; and the political economy of South Korea.

His writings have appeared in such diverse journals as the American Economic Review, Quarterly Journal of Economics, Cambridge Journal of Economics, Review of The Radical Economics, Monthly Review, Journal of Post Keynesian Economics, Journal of Economic Issues, and in many edited collections.