Johnnie Aseron has had 25 years’ experience of research, writing and working in and with First Nations communities in education, community development and wellness initiatives. He is currently the International Indigenous Research Liaison, Oorala Aboriginal Centre, University of New England, Australia.

Dr Sadeq Z. Bigdeli is a Senior Lecturer at the Te Piringa–Faculty of Law, University of Waikato, New Zealand. His area of research is the intersection of trade, development and environmental law and policy.

Professor Klaus Bosselmann is the Director of the New Zealand Centre for Environmental Law at the University of Auckland, New Zealand. His areas of specialisation are international environmental law, sustainability governance and environmental constitutionalism.

Christopher Chaulk began studying law after conducting English education and environmental awareness projects in Albania with the United States Peace Corps. He has also worked for the NGO Sierra Club and the chemical trade association American Chemistry Council.

Dr Joel I. Colón-Ríos is Senior Lecturer at the Faculty of Law, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand. His areas of research are constitutional and democratic theory, comparative constitutional law, and Latin American constitutionalism.

Professor Donna Craig is Professor of International, Comparative and National Environmental Law and Policy at the University of Western Sydney, Australia. Previously she was the co-director at the Macquarie University Centre for Environmental law.

Trevor Daya-Winterbottom is Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Law at the University of Waikato, New Zealand.

Professor Willemien du Plessis is Director of the Research Unit of the Faculty of Law, North-West University, Potchefstroom Campus, South Africa. Her areas of specialisation are environmental law and governance, land law and African customary law.
Ben France-Hudson is a lecturer at the University of Canterbury, New Zealand and is completing a PhD through the University of Otago. His research focuses on the law of private property, with a particular focus on natural resources and land law.

Dr Elizabeth Gachenga is a lecturer at Strathmore Law School and Associate Dean of the School of Management and Commerce at Strathmore University, Kenya. Her research areas of interest include: natural resource governance, climate change, legal ethics, biosafety and business law.

Justice Susan Glazebrook is a judge of the Supreme Court of New Zealand.

Lee Godden is a Professor at the Centre for Resources, Energy and Environmental law at Melbourne Law School, Melbourne University, Australia. Her foci are environmental law, water law and climate change. She has undertaken international comparative research on climate change and its biodiversity impacts.

Neyooxet Greymorning is Professor of Anthropology and Native American Studies at the University of Montana, USA and has been named three times (1999, 2004, 2005) to Who’s Who Among America’s College and University Teachers. Trained in the fields of linguistic and political anthropology, he earned his PhD from the University of Oklahoma in 1992 and began his academic career at the University of Alberta. Since joining the faculty at Montana in 1994, he has also lectured as a visiting scholar at Southern Cross University, Australia (in 1997, 1998, 1999, 2003, 2007, 2009, 2010, 2011) and served as the Acting Director of the Indigenous Governance Programs at the University of Victoria in British Columbia, Canada in 2001–2002.

Ramesh Karky holds an SJD from Golden Gate USA and LLM from VUB, Belgium. He was a Postdoctoral Fellow (2010–13), Visiting Professor of Int’l Trade Regulation (2013) and intellectual property teacher (2012) at Western University, Canada; International Expert Consultant (2006–09); and has expertise in biotech law, intellectual property law, international trade (WTO) law and international law.

Amelia Keene graduated with an LLM from Columbia University in 2013 on the New Zealand Law Foundation Ethel Benjamin Scholarship. She specialises in international law and environmental law. She currently clerks at the International Court of Justice, the Netherlands.

Dr Amanda Kennedy is the Deputy Director of the Australian Centre for Agriculture and Law at the University of New England, Australia. Her research interests are in the areas of environmental justice and land use governance.

Josi Khatarina is a senior legal specialist in the Indonesia Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation (REDD+) Agency. Her areas of specialisation are environmental law and legal aspect of forest and peat land governance.

Professor Paul Martin is the Director of the Australian Centre for Agriculture and Law at the University of New England, Australia. His areas of specialisation are natural resource governance and rural social justice.

Emily O’Connell is an environmental lawyer and was previously Principal Lawyer and Executive Officer of the Environmental Defender’s Office, Northern Territory, Australia. Emily is passionate about community education and knowledge, Indigenous land rights and earth justice.

Mark Perry is Professor of Law at the University of New England, Australia and Emeritus Professor of Computer Science, and of Law, at Western University, Canada. His research focuses on the nexus of law and science, bringing him a global reputation from his speaking and writing in both disciplines.

Wanida Phromlah has extensive experience in taxation law and forest governance system. She has lectured at the Faculty of Law, Mahasarakham University, Thailand for almost ten years.

The Hon. Justice Brian J. Preston SC is the Chief Judge of the Land and Environment Court of New South Wales, Australia; Adjunct Professor at the University of Sydney, Australia; Chair of LAWASIA’s Environmental Law Committee. He is the author of 80 articles and book chapters on environmental law.

Vernon Rive is a Senior Lecturer in Law at AUT Law School, Auckland,
New Zealand. He teaches and researches public law, environmental law and international environmental law, specialising in climate change mitigation and adaptation.

Dr Justin Gregory Rose is an environmental law researcher and practitioner whose contributions to government, civil society and academia have spanned numerous jurisdictions and areas of environmental concern.
He has, since 1998, specialised in Pacific island law.

Mas Achmad Santosa is the Deputy Head of the President Delivery Unit for Development Monitoring and Oversight (UKP4), Indonesia. His areas of specialisation are environmental law, forest and peat land governance and law enforcement.

Aldilla Stephanie Suwana is a legal specialist in the Indonesia Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation (REDD+) Agency. Her area of specialisation is legal aspect of forest and peat land governance.

Professor Anastasia Telesetsky teaches international environmental law at the College of Law in the Natural Resources and Environmental Law Program, University of Idaho, USA. She focuses on ecological restoration and climate adaptation.

Dr Jacqueline Williams is a senior researcher of the Australian Centre for Agriculture and Law at the University of New England, Australia. Her research interests include natural resource management, governance, social justice and sustainable agriculture.