About the authors

Lea Brilmayer is the Howard Holtzmann Professor of International Law at Yale Law School. There, she teaches various international law courses as well as Conflict of Laws. Between 1998 and 2010 she served as lead counsel for the State of Eritrea in several public international law arbitrations at the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague. One of these was the mass claims compensation commission of Eritrea v. Ethiopia, in which she worked with Lorraine Charlton and Chiara Giorgetti.

Lorraine Charlton is Knowledge Management Counsel at the National Office of Latham & Watkins LLP. In this capacity, she oversees internal publications related to financial regulation. Prior to rejoining Latham in 2014, Ms. Charlton was a staff attorney in the Office of International Affairs at the Securities and Exchange Commission.

For several years in the mid-2000s, Ms. Charlton served as Deputy Legal Advisor to the Office of the President of Eritrea. She represented the Eritrean government before the Eritrea–Ethiopia Claims Commission at the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague. She also managed the Office of the Legal Advisor in Asmara, Eritrea, and conducted evidence-gathering fieldwork throughout the country.

Before joining the Office of the Legal Advisor, Ms. Charlton worked as an associate in New York and Brussels for Cleary Gottlieb, and then in London for Latham & Watkins. Her work was concentrated in international securities offerings.

Ms. Charlton received her J.D. from New York University. She clerked for Judge Charles P. Sifton of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York.

Chiara Giorgetti is Associate Professor of Law at Richmond Law School in Virginia, where she teaches and writes in the areas of public international law, international arbitration, international dispute resolution, and statehood. She also serves as the Faculty Director of the School of Law’s LL.M. Program. She has published over a dozen articles and authored or edited four books.

Professor Giorgetti holds a law degree from Bologna University School of Law, a M.Sc. in Development Studies from the London School of Economics and Political Sciences, an LL.M. and a J.S.D. from Yale Law School. She clerked at the International Court of Justice in The Hague.