Tables

3.1 Difficulties with the dichotomous classification of brand marks 95
3.2 A typology of brand marks arrayed along an eidos gradient 97
3.3 Examples of brand marks categorized as Zone A, logotypes 101
3.4 Examples of brand marks categorized as Zone B, graphicized logotypes 103
3.5 Examples of emblazoned brand marks in Zone C, logos proper 105
3.6 Examples of emblematic brand marks from Zone C, logos proper 106
3.7 Examples of emblematic logos with no text component 107
3.8 Visual stimulation and reward provided by different subtypes of brand marks 108
4.1 Comparative distribution of brand marks for financial services 115
4.2 Characteristic examples of brand marks seen in financial services 116
4.3 Comparative distribution of brand marks for retailers 117
4.4 Characteristic examples of brand marks used by retailers 118
4.5 Comparative distribution of brand marks for positively and negatively purchased consumer packaged goods 121
4.6 Characteristic examples of packaged goods brand marks 122
4.7 Comparative distribution of marks used by B2B manufacturers 124
4.8 Characteristic examples of B2B manufacturer brand marks 125
6.1 Examples of figurative typefaces in brand marks 155
6.2 Two examples of ordinary typeface treatments in brand marks 159
6.3 A typology of typefaces 162
7.1 A typology of personification 171
8.1 Incidence of colors in national flags 189
8.2 Incidence of colors in brand marks 191
9.1 A typology of pictorial gambits in advertising 200
E.1 Pepsi and Coca-Cola typefaces as examples of intertextuality 223