

Contributors

Shalanda H. Baker is an Associate Professor, the Faculty Advisor to the Environmental Law Program, and the founding director of the Energy Justice Program at the University of Hawaii at Manoa William S. Richardson School of Law. Professor Baker teaches international environmental law, renewable energy law, sustainable development, administrative law, and related courses in energy and international development. Her research explores large energy and infrastructure project development, including renewable energy projects; indigenous rights; and the effect of development on the environment. She is an Associate Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School and a 2016–17 Fulbright-García Robles Scholar.

David Bollier is an independent American scholar, activist and blogger whose work focuses on the commons as a new paradigm of economics, politics and culture. He pursues this work primarily as co-founder of the Commons Strategies Group, an advocacy project that works internationally with various commons projects. Bollier has written or edited eight books on the commons, including Think Like a Commoner: A Short Introduction to the Life of the Commons (2014) and, with co-editor Silke Helfrich, Patterns of Commoning (2015) and The Wealth of the Commons (2012). He is an Associate Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School. He lives in Amherst, Massachusetts, and blogs at Bollier.org.

Catherine Iorns Magallanes is a Reader in the School of Law at Victoria University of Wellington, Aotearoa New Zealand. She works primarily on environmental law, indigenous rights, and statutory interpretation. Professor Iorns is also a national board member of Amnesty International Aotearoa New Zealand and of 350 Aotearoa. She is a member of the International Law Association Committee on the Implementation of the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, a member of the IUCN World Commission on Environmental Law, and is the Academic Advisor to the NZ Council of Legal Education. She holds an LLM from Yale Law School.

Mark James is an Assistant Professor at Vermont Law School and a Senior Research Fellow in the Institute for Energy and the Environment (IEE). Professor James holds an LLM in Energy Law from Vermont Law School and he served as an IEE Global Energy Fellow from 2014 to 2016. His work explores privacy protections for data generated by smart meters and rooftop solar arrays, the SunShot Plug and Play project to commercialize adhered solar PV panel technology, and federal hydro-power production tax credits. He received his JD from the University of Ottawa.

Kevin B. Jones is a Professor of Energy Technology and Policy and the Director of the Institute for Energy and the Environment at Vermont Law School. Professor Jones leads the Smart Grid Project and the Energy Clinic and is co-author of the book from Praeger, A Smarter, Greener Grid: Forging Environmental Progress through Smart Energy Policies and Technologies. He is a Senior Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School and a Lecturer in the University of Vermont's Sustainable Entrepreneurship MBA program.

Janelle Orsi is Co-founder and Executive Director of the Sustainable Economies Law Center (SELC), which facilitates the growth of more sustainable and localized economies through education, research and advocacy. She is a lawyer, advocate, writer and cartoonist focused on cooperatives, land trusts, and the grassroots sharing economy. Janelle has also worked in private law practice at the Law Office of Janelle Orsi, focusing on sharing economy law since 2008. She is author of Practicing Law in the Sharing Economy (ABA Books 2012) and The Sharing Solution (Nolo 2009). She is a Senior Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School.

Jedediah Purdy is a Professor of Law at Duke University. He teaches constitutional, environmental and property law and writes in all of these areas. He also teaches legal theory and writes on issues at the intersection of law and social and political thought. He is the author of a trilogy on American political identity, which concluded with A Tolerable Anarchy (2009); The Meaning of Property (2010), and After Nature: A Politics for the Anthropocene (2015). He has published many essays in publications including The Atlantic Monthly, the New York Times Op Ed Page and Book Review, Die Zeit and Democracy Journal, and his legal scholarship has appeared in the Yale Law Journal, University of Chicago Law Review, Duke Law Journal, Cornell Law Review and Harvard Environmental Law Review, among others.

Laurie Ristino is an Associate Professor and the Director of the Center for Agriculture and Food Systems at Vermont Law School. Before Vermont Law School, she was Senior Counsel with the Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) in Washington, D.C. advising on environmental matters ranging from protection of the northern spotted owl to the BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico. She received her law degree from the University Iowa College of Law and a Masters degree in public administration from George Mason University. She is a Senior Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School.

Melissa K. Scanlan is the Associate Dean of the Environmental Law Program, Professor of Law, Director of the Environmental Law Center, and Co-Founder and Director of the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School. Before Vermont Law School, she was the University of Wisconsin Law School's Water Law and Policy Scholar and a lead consultant involved in launching the Center for Water Policy at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee's School of Freshwater Sciences. She founded and served as Executive Director of Midwest Environmental Advocates. She earned her law degree and Master of Science in Environmental Science, Policy and Management from the University of California-Berkeley.

Linda Sheehan is Executive Director of Planet Pledge, which advances collaborative investments and grantmaking to reduce greenhouse gas emissions globally. Prior to Planet Pledge, she was Executive Director of the Earth Law Center, where she developed and implemented new legal models that acknowledge the natural world's inherent rights to exist, thrive and evolve. She previously ran California Coastkeeper Alliance, where she successfully advanced legislation, policy and litigation initiatives to improve waterway health, designate marine parks, and create new environmental funding streams. Ms Sheehan earned her BS degree from MIT, and her MPP and JD degrees from the University of California, Berkeley. She is a Senior Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School.

James Gustave "Gus" Speth is Co-Founder and Senior Fellow of the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School. He previously served as a law professor at Vermont Law School and Dean of the Yale School of Forestry and Environmental Studies. From 1993 to 1999, he was Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme and Chair of the UN Development Group. Prior to his service at the UN, he was Founder and President of the World Resources Institute;

Professor of Law at Georgetown University; Chair of the US Council on Environmental Quality in the Carter administration; and Co-founder and Senior Attorney of the Natural Resources Defense Council. He currently co-chairs The Next System Project.

Jennifer Taub is a Professor of Law at Vermont Law School. She researches and writes in the areas of corporate governance, financial market reform, securities regulation and white collar crime. Her first book was Other People's Houses: How Decades of Bailouts, Captive Regulators, and Toxic Bankers Made Home Mortgages a Thrilling Business (2014). Professor Taub is also the co-author of Corporate and White Collar Crime: Cases and Materials, 6th edn (2017). She has testified before the United States Senate Banking Committee and a United States House Financial Services Subcommittee concerning financial reform matters. Prior to joining academia, Taub was an Associate General Counsel with Fidelity Investments. She received her BA degree, cum laude, from Yale University, and her JD, cum laude, from Harvard Law School. She teaches business law courses, including Contracts, Corporations, Securities Regulation and White Collar Crime. She is a Senior Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School.

Diana R. H. Winters is an Associate Professor at the Indiana University McKinney School of Law, where she joined the faculty in August of 2012. Previously, she was a Visiting Assistant Professor at Boston University Law School, an Assistant Solicitor General for the New York Attorney General's Office, and an Associate at Hogan Lovells (then Hogan & Hartson). She teaches torts, health law and policy, and food law, and her research focuses on food law and the interaction between different levels of regulatory authority. She received her PhD in the History of the American Civilization from Harvard University, and her JD, cum laude, from New York University School of Law.

Mary Christina Wood is the Philip H. Knight Professor of Law and Faculty Director of the University of Oregon School of Law's Environmental and Natural Resources Law Center. She teaches property law, natural resources law, public trust law, federal Indian law and environmental law courses. She is the Founding Director of the school's nationally acclaimed Environmental and Natural Resources Law Center and is Faculty Leader of the Program's Conservation Trust Project, Native Environmental Sovereignty Project, and Food Resiliency Project. Professor Wood is the co-author of a textbook in natural resources law and one in public trust law, and is the author of Nature's Trust: Environmental Law for a New Ecological Age (Cambridge University Press 2013). She has written extensively about climate crisis and is a frequent speaker on environmental issues. She is an Associate Fellow with the New Economy Law Center at Vermont Law School.