This book has a special meaning for various reasons. First, it is indebted to all the stories of the victims and survivors of the worst human rights violations in the Americas. Therefore, the book is a legacy of many people fighting for social justice. Secondly, it is indebted to the support of the Faculty of Law Tijuana of the Autonomous University of Baja California. I owe particular thanks to Eduardo Ferrer Mac-Gregor for his support and academic input. He encouraged me to expose the enormous contribution of the Inter-American jurisprudence over ESR. Thanks are due to the academic community of the Society of Legal Scholars and to the colleagues that I met with in Oxford and Dublin who provided useful feedback on drafts of this book. I am grateful to all at Edward Elgar Publishing, especially to Iram Satti for her assistance and patience. Lastly, I wish to thank Lucy Metherell and José Luis Contreras for their invaluable help in correcting the manuscript. All remaining errors, however, are my own. This book is dedicated to my dad, and all my lovely sisters and brothers.
