Acknowledgments

First and foremost, I would like to thank Professor Joyeeta Gupta and Dr. Mirjam Ros-Tonen for their superb support in guiding me through the research that forms the basis of this book. Their inspiring comments, insightful guidance regarding both the theoretical and the methodological aspects of this research, patience, editorial suggestions and invaluable practical support were essential for this undertaking.

I would like to sincerely thank the many people who have provided feedback, comments or other inputs on this endeavor, including Markko Aho, Charles Barber, Lourdes Barragan, Federica Bietta, Josefina Braña Varela, Joanna Cabello, Estebancio Castro, Tim Christopherson, Paul Chung, Bas Clabbers, David Cooper, Simon Counsell, Roman Czebeniak, Gerhard Dieterle, Kate Dooley, Gary Dunning, Andreas Fichlin, Horst Freiburg, Ian Fry, Jesus Garcia de la Torre, Rachel Harris, Nils Hermann, Bente Herstad, Victor Illescus, Holly Jonas, Markku Kanninen, Alain Karsenty, Horst Korn, Andrey Laletin, John Lanchberry, Orin Langelle, Victor Lopez, Elke Mannigel, Nele Marien, Francesco Martone, Onel Masardule, Jan McAlpine, Kenn Mondai, Camila Moreno, Samuel Nnah, Gonzalo Oviedo, Gham Shyan Pandey, Philipp Pattberg, Helena Paul, Anne Petermann, Ana Pinto Fernandez, Jose Antonio Prado, Peg Pott, Carlos Manuel Rodriguez, Isaac Rojas, Carlos Roxo, Maria Sanz Sanchez, Paul Kanyinke Sena, Marcel Silvius, Cassandra Smithies, Tewolde Berhan Egziabher, Ricardo Ulate, Natalia Unterstrell, Tiina Varhanen, Arild Vatn, Antony La Viña, Susanne von Walter and Andrew Wardell. I particularly want to thank my life partner Dr. Miguel Lovera Rivas, a former REDD+ negotiator, who not only inspired me to start this research, but also provided crucial guidance and advice on both the theoretical and the methodological aspects. His comments and other feedback, both during the long research process and during the review phase, not only gave me the confidence to continue in moments of doubt, but also sharpened my analysis of some of the social and political dimensions of REDD+.

I want to thank all my friends and colleagues in the Global Forest Coalition (GFC), not just for their feedback, support and flexibility in allowing me to adapt my working hours to the requirements of this research, but especially for the many inspiring discussions we have had.
Agents, assumptions and motivations behind REDD+ about REDD+ and the agents behind REDD+ during the past 15 years. It was the insights and wisdom shared during these discussions that inspired me to carry out research on REDD+ in the first place. I also want to thank many colleagues, friends and allies from the wider climate justice movement for their views, analysis and genuine ambition to strive for a radically different system of governing this planet. I very much hope I can use the insights gathered through this research to contribute to that ambition in the years to come. The views expressed in the book do not necessarily represent the views of the Global Forest Coalition or its member groups.

Last but not least, it was my parents, and especially my father Henk Bilderbeek, a man who has read literally thousands of books during his lifetime, who convinced me of the value of life-long learning. I dedicate this book to his memory, and to my children, in the hope that they will be equally inspired to become life-long learners.
