Acknowledgments

This independent research was supported in part by the Australian Research Council pursuant to the Future Fellowship scheme (project number FT130100416). In addition, Elizabeth would like to acknowledge the generous support of the Vice-Chancellor's Postdoctoral Research Fellowship program at the University of Wollongong.

This book builds on research and ideas explored in previous publications that compared the treatment of a specific legal principle or concept in the international trade law and international investment law regimes. The relevant publications are identified in each chapter of this volume, and we are grateful to co-authors of the previous publications for their collaboration and insights. In particular, we thank Jennifer Hawkins, David Heaton, Caroline Henckels, Jarrod Hepburn, Neha Mishra, James Munro and Tania Voon. We are also indebted to James Munro for sharing his expertise and providing extremely useful comments on this manuscript and to Theodore Samlidis for his thorough proofreading. Any views expressed here are our own and do not necessarily represent those of any employer or other entity. Any errors are also ours.
