Acknowledgments

In order to complete this book, I obtained support from people all over the world. I am especially grateful to Dr. Richard Price at the University of British Columbia, as well as Dr. Brian Job and Dr. Katharina Coleman for their academic support and advice. Dr. Paul Evans and Dr. Yves Tiberghien at UBC also gave me copious advice for my academic work. I also appreciate Dr. Thomas Weiss, Presidential Professor of Political Science and Director Emeritus at Ralph Bunche Institute for International Studies at City University of New York who provides me with numerous opportunities to share my research outcomes, as well as Dr. Christina Davis, Professor in the Department of Government and Director of the Program on U.S.-Japan Relations, Harvard University who keeps giving me academic advice and support. I deeply appreciate Dr. Adam Lupel, Acting President and Chief Operating Officer at International Peace Institute (IPI) in New York, as well Ms. Feeney Anne Marie, Senior Director of External Relations at IPI, who kindly hosted my lecture in the seminar on inclusivity in peacebuilding in June 2018; I also thank Mr. Jake Sherman who moderated the session.

In the UN system, I sincerely thank Atul Khare, Under-Secretary-General for Operational Support, who supported my research projects with a written endorsement. I also appreciate David Malone, Under-Secretary-General and Rector of the United Nations University for his continuous advice and support. I am also deeply grateful to Maria Fernanda Espinosa, President of 73rd session of the UN General Assembly, who has cooperated for my projects in many fronts. I am very grateful to Khaled Khiari, Assistant Secretary-General for Middle East, Asia and the Pacific; Oscar Fernandez-Taranco, Assistant Secretary-General for Peacebuilding Support; Bintou Keita, Assistant Secretary-General for Africa; Miroslav Jenča, Assistant Secretary-General for Europe, Central Asia and Americas—all of whom are in the Departments of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs and Peace Operations and gave me precious advice and support for my field research and projects. I also thank Lisa M. Bутtenheim, Assistant Secretary-General for Support Operations, for her advice. I am especially grateful to Mr. Peter Due, Director, Asia and Pacific Division, UN Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs and Department of Peace Operations, who came to Tokyo to deliver a lecture at Sophia University in 2019 and continues to support my research projects. I am grateful to Ayaka Suzuki, Director, Secretary-General's Office; Fatemeh

Ziai, Director for Coordination and Shared Services in DPPA-DPO; Barrie Freeman, Director and Deputy Head, Peacebuilding Support Office; and Robert Dann, former chief of the Mediation Support Unit for their great advice and support.

I also appreciate Henk-Jan Brinkman, Chief of Peacebuilding Strategy and Partnerships in the UN Peacebuilding Support Office (PBSO), who hosted numerous opportunities for me to make presentations at UN Headquarters in New York to share my research outcomes. I also thank François Grignon, Deputy Director, East Africa Division, who supported my research in South Sudan. I am also appreciative of support by so many colleagues at UN Headquarters, including Elizabeth Roland, Mari Yamashita, Markus Bouillon, Hiroko Miyamura, Takakazu Ito, Kyoko Ono, Peter Mutua, to name but a few. I appreciate great support by Fabrizio Hochschild, Special Adviser on the Preparations for the Commemoration of the United Nations' 75th Anniversary. I also appreciate Jack

I also thank Tayé-Brook Zerihoun, former Assistant Secretary-General in charge of Africa in the Department of Political Affairs, who introduced me to key UN officials in Africa. I sincerely appreciate Talatbek Masadykov, former political director in the UN Assistance Mission in Afghanistan. I am also grateful to Christopher Coleman, former Deputy Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Kosovo and Deputy Director of the Africa II Division in the Department of Political Affairs (DPA), who provided frequent support for my research over the past 16 years. I also appreciate Carolyn McAskie, former Assistant Secretary-General for Peacebuilding, who supported my research projects in 2006 to 2008 with a letter of recommendation, as well as Edmond Mulet, former UN Chef de Cabinet who kept encouraging my research.

On South Sudan, I appreciate Kono Taro, Foreign Minister who assigned me to visit South Sudan in 2019 (and Iraq in 2018 and 2019) to make intellectual contributions to peacebuilding. I sincerely appreciate Amb. Seiji Okada, Japanese ambassador to South Sudan, who gave me a great deal of support for my research in South Sudan. I am also grateful to Nicolas Haysom, Special Representative of the Secretary-General (SRSG) and Head of the UN Mission in South Sudan, who gave me numerous interviews in the last several years. I am very appreciative of Ismail Wais, IGAD Special Envoy for South Sudan, who gave me great insights about the South Sudan peace process during his interview. I also appreciate Taban Deng Gai, first vice-president of South Sudan; Amb. James Morgan, South Sudan's ambassador to Ethiopia and permanent representative to the AU; Peter Adwak, former Minister of High Education; and numerous other colleagues in South Sudan who gave me interviews and support for my research projects. I also appreciate Prof. Robert Deng, Acting Vice Chancellor of Juba University, and other professors at Juba

University who hosted my special lecture in South Sudan in 2019, as well as Dr. Lual Deng, managing director at Eboni Center in South Sudan.

With regard to Afghanistan, I appreciate Nadir Naim, former Vice Chair of the Afghan High Peace Council and Chairman at Kabul Institute for Peace, who co-hosted a series of sessions on the Afghan peace process with me. I also thank Scott Smith, a senior expert for Afghanistan peace processes at the U.S. Institute of Peace. I also thank numerous Afghan colleagues in the UN Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) who still keep in touch with me and support my research projects. I also appreciate support from Professor Alistair Edgar of Wilfrid Laurier University in Canada as well as Richard Ponzio, Director, Global Governance, Justice & Security Program at the Stimson Center, on a series of seminars on the Afghan peace process.

On Syria, special thanks to Staffan de Mistura, UN Special Envoy for Syria in 2017, who gave me a critical interview for this book. I also appreciate Kansuke Nagaoka, Director-General (Assistant Minister), at the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs, who supported my research in Geneva on Syria as he worked for the Japanese mission to the UN in Geneva in 2017. I also appreciate the numerous Syrian refugees and experts who gave me special cooperation and support for my research. I am very grateful to PARCIC, a Japanese NGO, which supported my interviews with Syrian refugees in Lebanon. On Yemen, I appreciate the support by the Japanese embassy in Amman, as well as the UN Office of the Special Envoy for Yemen, who gave me support on my research in 2020.

On Iraq, I particularly thank Amb. Fumio Iwai in the Japanese embassy in Iraq and Amb. Naofumi Hashimoto, who hosted my lectures in Baghdad and gave me great support for my research in Iraq. I also appreciate Nouri al-Maliki, Osama al-Nujaifi, and Ayad Allawi, who are vice presidents of Iraq and gave me precious individual discussions during my visits to Iraq in both 2018 and 2019. I also appreciate Haider al-Abadi, former prime minister of Iraq, who gave me a one-hour interview. I am very grateful to Al-Naharan Center, which hosted my lecture in 2018, as well as many professors of Baghdad University who hosted my lecture in 2019. I also thank Alice Walpole, former Deputy Special Representative of the Secretary-General, United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq, who gave me precious support and comments on Iraqi peacebuilding.

On East Timor (Timor-Leste), I appreciate the support by Xanana Gusmão, former president and prime minister of Timor-Leste, as well as Mari Alkatiri, former prime minister, who created the opportunities to discuss East Timor peacebuilding with me in 2008 and 2017. I also thank the government officials of Timor-Leste, including Amb. Filomeno Aleixo da Cruzas, Timor-Leste ambassador in Japan, as well as the officials in the Japanese embassy, Japan

International Cooperation Agency (JICA), and PARCIC in East Timor who supported my research projects.

I also appreciate Amb. Kimihiro Ishikane, Permanent Representative of Japan to the United Nations, who supported my research with a letter of recommendation, as well as Amb. Koro Bessho, Amb. Motohide Yoshikawa, Amb. Tsuneo Nishida, Amb. Yukio Takasu, and Amb. Kenzo Oshima, who supported my research with written endorsements. I would like to share my sincere condolences to Amb. Kenzo Oshima, and Dr. Sadako Ogata, who was the former president of JICA (Japan International Cooperation Agency) and the head of UNHCR. Both Sadako Ogata and Kenzo Oshima have given me numerous supports for my academic researches and practices since 2004.

I am very grateful to Takeo Akiba, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs; Hiroshi Ishikawa, Deputy Minister; Katsuhiko Takahashi, Director-General and Assistant Minister in the Middle Eastern and African Affairs Bureau; Takeshi Akahori, Deputy Director-General in the Foreign Policy Bureau at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Japan; as well as Naoto Hisajima, Director-General, International Cooperation Headquarters, Cabinet Office in Japan. All of them kindly keep supporting my research projects.

I also wish to thank Prof. Maruyama Makoto at the University of Tokyo, who supported my exchange program to work for the Japanese mission to the United Nations as Minister-Counsellor from 2012 to 2014. I also appreciate the support from Prof. Hideo Kimura, Prof. Moriyuki Hoshino, Prof. Takumi Moriyama, Prof. Atsushi Ishida, Prof. Mitsugu Endo, and numerous other professors at the University of Tokyo where I worked as associate professor until 2016.

I am also grateful to Prof. Tsutomu Sakuma, Prof. Yoshiaki Terumichi, Prof. Sali Augustine, Prof. Yasushi Hirosato, Prof. Taro Komatsu, Prof. Makiko Deguchi, Prof. Mikiko Sugiura, Prof. Yuka Mizutani, Prof. Koichi Nakano, Prof. Yoshihiro Oto, Prof. Motomi Yajima, Prof. Masayuki Akahori, Prof. Juro Otsuka, Prof. Masayuki Fujimura, Prof. Miki Sugimura, Prof. Tetsuro Morishita, and other colleagues who support my research projects and numerous seminars at Sophia University where I transferred to in 2016 and have been working as professor.

I also would like to express many thanks to members of the Japanese congress who supported my research projects and hosted my presentations, including Minoru Kiuchi, Masahiko Koumura, Yoko Kamikawa, Yasuhisa Shiozaki, Tetsuro Fukuyama, Kouichiro Genba, and Yukio Edano.

I obtained the Grant in Aid for Scientific Research (called Kaken in Japan) titled, “Peacebuilding and Political Exclusion: Why Do the Same Mistakes Occur?” from 2016 to 2019, and “Peacebuilding and Political Party: Challenges of Transforming Insurgency into Political Parties” from 2019 to the present.

I also appreciate Diana Breti, who has been supporting my English papers and books, including this book, since 2004 for native-checking and editing. I am grateful to Risa Yoshino, who assisted in organizing my citations for this book. I also sincerely appreciate Alex Pettifer, Editorial Director at Edward Elgar Publishing as well as Finn Halligan at Edward Elgar Publishing who support the completion of my book.

I would like to express a special appreciation for Mr. António Guterres, UN Secretary-General who delivered his special lecture at Sophia University in 2017, which I hosted; he kindly gave me an encouraging message for my research projects. I am also very grateful for Mr. Miguel Graca, Director and Special Assistant for the Secretary-General for his continuous support.

Lastly, I express special thanks to my wife, Masae Higashi, and my son, Taisei Higashi, who left Japan with me in 2004 to support my studies at UBC. Masae currently works as a Japanese language instructor for foreign students at Japanese universities. Taisei just graduated from university and started working for a company in Japan. This book would never have been realized without their support and encouragement.
