About the authors

Tijs Laenen is a social worker turned social scientist, currently working as a postdoctoral researcher at the Centre for Sociological Research, KU Leuven (Belgium). His main research interest and expertise lies in studying popular attitudes towards differently targeted and differently organized welfare state policies.

CO-AUTHORS

Christian Albrekt Larsen is Professor at Aalborg University (Denmark) specializing in the question of how to build social coherent societies in open economies and multicultural settings. His academic work demonstrates that the institutional structure behind the ‘Nordic model’ still provides a promising answer to this fundamental question of social science. Internationally, he is best known for his work on how institutions, especially universal welfare schemes, enhance public support for anti-poverty policies and social trust.

Bart Meuleman is Professor at the Centre for Sociological Research, KU Leuven (Belgium). He is President of the European Survey Research Association (ESRA) and Belgian National Coordinator of the European Social Survey (ESS). His research interests include cross-national comparisons of attitudes towards the welfare state and deservingness principles.

Federica Rossetti is a doctoral researcher at the Centre for Sociological Research, KU Leuven (Belgium). Her main research interest is the cross-national analysis of public support for welfare policies, with a focus on activation policies for the unemployed.

Wim van Oorschot is Professor of Social Policy at the Centre for Sociological Research, KU Leuven (Belgium). His main research interests are the European Union comparative analysis of the social legitimacy of welfare policies and their reforms. He is initiator and co-designer of the Welfare Attitudes modules in the European Social Survey (ESS) 2008 and 2016.